

1: The Disappearing Act - Fallout 4

The Disappearing Act is a side quest in Fallout 4. Quick walkthrough Accept the quest from Nick Valentine's office. (Optional) Obtain the key to Earl Sterling's house (Vadim Bobrov was his friend and will give it).

Franklin Wesley Snipes is polishing the floors in what will be her new apartment. He informs her that she cannot move in yet due to her wood grain floors not being dry. An upset Zora threatens to fire one of the moving men, who proceed to leave her furniture and boxes on the sidewalk. Desperate, she asks Franklin to help her move her things. After moving her in, they begin to talk and she accepts his offer to help her unpack and get settled in. Later while Zora is walking home, she finds Franklin waiting for her on the stoop and chastises him for coming by without warning. Franklin says he was waiting for her because he wanted to see her. Zora invites Franklin inside. They cannot hide their mutual attraction and proceed to have sex. Later, the couple talk of their dreams and aspirations; Zora wants to become a singer and Franklin wants to get his contracting business off the ground. Both confess that they were putting off love until they got themselves together. Franklin then tells Zora that he is not a wealthy man. Zora reassures him, stating that she is not looking for a rich man. The two spend a lot of time together eating home cooked meals, playing Scrabble, and watching television. While getting a drink with his friend Jimmy Clark Johnson, Franklin expresses that he likes Zora because she listens and they talk more than have sex. Jimmy then repays a loan that Franklin had made him. Zora then auditions for up-and-coming producer Reggie Baptiste Q-Tip, and gets cut a deal to do a six-song demo with him. Franklin confesses to Zora that he dropped out of high school in the eleventh grade, never earning a GED. He also tells her that although separated for the last four years, he is still married with two sons. Zora does not take the news well and Franklin accuses her of caring more about "degrees and dollars" than their relationship. The next day, Zora finds Franklin at work and admits that she would not have gotten involved with him had she known the truth about him earlier. She then confides that she loves him and asks him to move in with her, expressing the desire to meet his children. In return, he tells her he loves her and promises that as soon as he gets the money he will get the divorce. Despite all the obstacles, the couple continue to fall deeper in love, but things come to a head when Zora suffers an epileptic seizure while sleeping. The next morning when confronted by Franklin on why he never knew of her condition, she says she did not want to scare him off. Franklin reassures her that it will take more than that to get him to walk away. A while later, Zora gets pregnant. She wants an abortion since she does not think the time is right. But Franklin convinces her to keep the baby, and nine months later she gives birth to a boy named Jeremiah. After the birth of the baby, times get really hard for Zora and Frankie. He is out of work again and because of this he drinks and forgets to pick up the baby from daycare, this causes Zora to leave work to pick up the baby and miss her recording session with Reg. Reg is unhappy about this so she loses her demo deal. One night Zora and Frankie get in a heated argument and they break up. A heart broken Frankie drinks and plays sad records while Zora sleeps in the other room. While she is away a distraught and angry Frankie vandalizes their once home together with a hammer and leaves. He says he wants to see his son. She lets him in and Frankie holds his son and puts him to bed. The ex-couple then converse about what has been going on. Frankie tells Zora that he is taking his contractor test the next day and that he got his GED. Zora tells him that she writes songs and that one of them is on the radio. While walking out the door Frankie talks about their love and how it was real no matter what the timing was. He leaves and she follows him and says "I never got to beat you in Scrabble". He smiles, goes back upstairs and they play Scrabble.

November 23, I met a man who I trusted and loved implicitly. I now know he is a full blown psychopath and end stage alcoholic. Once he started acting really really strange, I knew there was no hope. This man has plowed his way through everything and everyone and in his sick distorted thinking still thought we all loved him for how great he thought he was. I feel ashamed of him in every way. I am very fortunate to have escaped this disaster. He was a walking disaster zone, extremely self absorbed with no loyalty of any kind to anyone, a mere resource based robot, the epitome of utter manipulation and a con in every way. There is Karma though. He is a walking time bomb due to the end stage alcoholism. It is all in his head. I believe he is very close to death from alcoholism. It used to hurt me to know this, but he has disappeared forever and I know that I will never see him or talk to him again on earth as living human beings. On his pictures, he already looks dead. He is still 2 at 67, very very disturbing. I believe he is capable of just about anything. He was like some completely crazy scary dangerous sick rabid animal, very very scary. I am fortunate to be safe and never to hear from him again. I believe he is dangerous to whoever he interacts with in every way. It is so utterly disgusting to know this about someone I once loved implicitly, but he is not and never was the nice lie he made himself to be. He has been rotten to the core for a very very long time, but I think as he got older and became an end stage alcoholic, he was no longer able to hold up the mask of normality. In many ways, this is emotional retardation disguised for a short while when they want to appear to look normal. NO amount of talking, love or support can put a dent in this. Spend 2 months with them emotionally and the mask will slip invariably, without exception if you are perceptive enough to see it and courageous enough to face the truth. Courage sets you free with compassion and acceptance and joy and happiness return to your life, ONLY and as long as you stay permanently without him:

Cait will dislike arresting Crocker, but like talking him down peacefully. Curie will like both arresting or talking Crocker down peacefully. Piper will like both arresting or talking Crocker down peacefully. Deacon will like arresting Crocker, whether the persuasion is successful or not. Hancock will dislike arresting Crocker and dislike attempting to talk him down peacefully, however he will like using violence. Nick Valentine will like arresting Crocker, but dislike killing him. Danse will like arresting Crocker, but is neutral towards a peaceful conclusion. Strong will like arresting Crocker and dislike attempting to talk him down peacefully, however he will love using violence. Codsworth will like talking him down peacefully. X will like skipping arrest and going straight to violence. Preston Garvey will like both arresting Crocker and talking him down peacefully, but will dislike using violence. Notes Edit Doctor Sun will take over the responsibility of facial surgery after the completion of this quest, and will have moved into the Mega Surgery Center. In order to get your first surgery from him, you must request the service twice, the first time the chair does not activate nor does he take your caps. One can skip the first few objectives and go straight into the Mega Surgery Center cellar. The surgery cellar key can be obtained before starting the quest, by pickpocketing either Doctor Sun or Doc Crocker. Bugs PC Playstation 4 If you are high enough in level for the Far Harbor mission " Far From Home " to show up, you might have difficulty in getting Ellie to recognize that you have completed this mission. It appears her priority is to get you to take the new mission rather than pay off and close this one. PC If attempting this quest when the Mega surgery center is not open, Dr. Sun will be there but the objective to talk to him will not appear after Crocker dies. If you can get past him, completing the quest by talking to Ellie will return everything to normal.

Disappearing Acts is the only book I've read by this author. What made me enjoy the book so thoroughly was the way the characters were developed in alternating chapters, each describing an incident as reflected by his/her point of view.
