No more lame excuses. The NSW Premier Gladys Berejiklian must commit to starting work on the Metro to Parramatta (via Epping) this year while the Epping to Chatswood line is shut down for 7 months.

Its local government area is the City of Whittlesea. Epping had a population of 32, with a growth rate of 9. Epping has a mainly flat terrain though, towards the north, lie several large hills, which provide an excellent view of Melbourne. McDonalds Road and High Street are the main thoroughfares. History A village reserve was surveyed in , where Epping later developed. The village was named Epping, after Epping Forest ,[3] in , by which time a hotel from and a Catholic school were established. Epping Post Office opened on 1 September In the area around Epping became Darebin Shire, which was renamed Epping Shire in until it was united with Whittlesea Shire in By the time the Shire was created, Epping township contained several churches, hotels and a state school, as well as church school. Farmers of Irish origin predominated, but English, Scots and Germans settled there. There were several dairy farms. The Melbourne to Whittlesea railway had a station at Epping and the main areas to benefit were the transport of milk and quarry products. The original Epping township is on higher ground west of the Darebin Creek the Catholic Church being the only one not to have moved from lower flood-risk land. Several older buildings are constructed in bluestone , plentiful in the surrounding volcanic plains. Major suburban development took place from the s onwards and the northern fringes of the area are currently in the process of being developed for housing. The Northern Hospital adjoins it. Dalton Village is a small shopping centre which is located on Dalton Road in Epping. There are many parks and reserves located throughout the suburb. Many other vocational education and training courses are also available. Several bus routes operate within the area, which connects commuters with train and tram services.

The Sydney Morning Herald has reported that work on the Metro Northwest line between Rouse Hill and Epping is now running to schedule and the new Metro line should be open in the first half of . That article noted that the worst part of the Parramatta Light Rail proposal was that it involved converting the heavy rail line between Carlingford and Clyde to light rail rather than a serious fast high capacity rail connection between Parramatta and Epping. The red line shows the Carlingford to Rosehill section of the Carlingford-Clyde line. The Green lines show the short new tunnels that would be required to complete the Parramatta to Epping Metro connection. An alternative high capacity route to the city via the North Shore was the original idea when the Chatswood to Epping line was built. The pressure on the Western Line would be massively reduced if those people travelling to North Sydney and the North Shore could do so on a rail connection via Epping and Chatswood. Work in these stub tunnels and at Carlingford station can commence immediately. Perfect opportunity to start work at Epping – The forthcoming 7 month shutdown of the Chatswood to Epping rail line to convert it for Metro operations is a perfect opportunity to do any works required to create an intersection between the new Metro North West and the existing stub tunnels heading towards Parramatta. An Epping connection to Parramatta could be made ready while the line is in shutdown. This will reduce the need for any future shutdowns to complete the Parramatta to Epping Metro. Make the Sydney Metro more useful? The Sydney Metro is designed to be automated with frequent services and short dwell times. Future Metro trains leaving from Epping station could then be directed either to the Northwest or to Parramatta. Likewise Metro trains from Parramatta and the Northwest would merge at Epping and then travel along the existing Epping to Chatswood line. Branching the line at Epping will ensure its potential is used sooner rather than later. The only tunnelling required is the short section between Carlingford an Epping and another short section to connect Rosehill station to Parramatta. This line would involve tunnels almost the entire 20 Km length of the proposed route. Apart from being hideously expensive it will be hideously slow to build. Gladys reckons is the likely date services will be operating. By all means build a Metro West but the pressure to do so will be greatly reduced by building the Parramatta to Epping Metro first. By doing so another transport spoke with Parramatta at the centre can be created. Blue lines – the NorthWest Metro and the Metro construction from Chatswood to the North Sydney Red Lines – existing heavy rail lines – the Chatswood to Epping section will be converted to Metro operations in September Green lines – the short sections needed to complete a Parramatta to Epping Metro connection. Minimal tunnel is required compared to what was required for the North West Metro. Purple Line – the proposed 20 km Metro West that will take at least a decade to build and will cost a fortune. It simply ticks too many boxes: Low cost Existing rail corridor for much of the route. High demand for the service Wide range of other valuable benefits What does Mr Geoff Lee have to say? The local member for Parramatta Mr Geoff Lee is a pleasant guy, a long time resident of Western Sydney and a university lecturer in business. Geoff it is time to wake up and do something serious for Parramatta and Western Sydney.

Pollination Trophic levels of food chains The levels of a food chain food pyramid is called Trophic levels. The trophic level of an organism is the level it holds in a food pyramid. The sun is the source of all the energy in food chains. The second level of the food chains is called the Primary Consumer. These consume the green plants. Animals in this group are usually herbivores. Examples include insects, sheep, caterpillars and even cows. The third in the chain are Secondary Consumers. These usually eat up the primary consumers and other animal matter. They are commonly called carnivores and examples include lions, snakes and cats. The fourth level is called Tertiary Consumers. These are animals that eat secondary consumers. Quaternary Consumers eat tertiary consumers. At the top of the levels are Predators. They are animals that have little or no natural enemies. Predators feed on preys. A prey is an animal that predators hunt to kill and feed on. Predators include owls, snakes, wild cats, crocodiles and sharks. Humans can also be called predators. When any organism dies, detritivores like vultures, worms and crabs eat them up. The rest are broken down by decomposers mostly bacteria and fungi , and the exchange of energy continues. Decomposers start the cycle again.
