1: The Heifer and The Ox - Fables of Aesop

"The Frog and the Ox", "The Fisher", "The Fox and the Mask" and "The Sick Lion" The Frog and the Ox Fable A Free Aesop's Fable with a moral for kids & children.

Too big, too bad. Conceit may lead to self-destruction. It was as big as a mountain, with horns on its head, and a long tail, and it had hoofs divided in two. Again the old one blew himself out, and asked the young one if the Ox was as big as that. So the Frog took a deep breath, and blew and blew and blew, and swelled and swelled and swelled; and said: As he splashed heavily into the water, he crushed a young Frog into the mud. The old Frog soon missed the little one and asked his brothers and sisters what had become of him. The Frog puffed up still more. But the little Frogs all declared that the monster was much, much bigger and the old Frog kept puffing herself out more and more until, all at once, she burst. Moral Do not attempt the impossible. When the mother Frog came to the spot for she happened to be away at the time she asked his brothers where he was. Cooper, Townsend version An ox drinking at a pool trod on a brood of young frogs and crushed one of them to death. The Mother coming up, and missing one of her sons, inquired of his brothers what had become of him. And so the matter ended. Should you with pride innate and swell, As did the frog: Your sides may crack as has been shown, And we with laughing crack our own. His brothers and sisters, who were playing near, at once ran to tell their mother what had happened. The mother, who was a vain old thing, thought that she could easily make herself as large. Moral Betwixt pride, envy, and ambition, men fancy themselves to be bigger than they are, and other people to be less: Rana et Bos Rana, cupida aequandi bovem, se distendebat. Filius hortabatur matrem coepto desistere, dicens nihil enim esse ranam ad bovem. Illa autem, posthabito consilio, secundum intumuit.
