2: 9 strategies to win the credit card payments game - www.enganchecubano.com

Wherever you find yourself in the game of life today, your credit plays a role in the future you'll paint for you and yours. Ready to explore how credit can shape your road ahead?

Use multiple monthly payments to cut interest. Play it right and you get ease, convenience and rewards. One of the best ways to win the credit card game: Pay balances in full every month. The average card APR hovers just above 16 percent. But no balance means no interest. One myth is that consumer need to carry a balance to build their credit score. Using too much of your credit each month can torpedo your scores. The less you use, the better it is for your score. But that can backfire. One way to win the credit card billing game is by skipping fees. Many card issuers no longer charge over-limit fees. Contact your credit card issuer to learn more about the process to revoke your election. View cards as a convenience, not a loan. One big card blunder: Using plastic as a short-term loan instead of a handy payment device. Depending on the card issuer, that cash advance could also cost you in another way. As a result, your card issuer could cut your credit line or raise your interest rate. Understand due dates and processing times. Talk with bill-pay provider to find out how many days to allow for delivery. Your payment due date has to be on the same date every month. Or, if your income allows it, set all card bills for the same day, says Besharat. With only one billing date to remember, you reduce your chances of forgetting a bill and incurring expensive late fees or penalty rates. Credit card payment due dates explained 7. A few days late with that card bill? But late payments still come at a cost. The issuer could also slap penalty rates on balances that average nearly 30 percent. Dornan, however, admits these penalties might be harder to fight if the issuer raised the rate because a consumer was late. Paying off a big balance? Consider using a tool that homeowners have used for years to pay down mortgages more quickly: Call the card issuer, tell them what you want to do, and make sure your issuer can support multiple payments. A little bit of diligence and research can turn your card payment strategy into a winning game, resulting in lower interest rates, fewer fees and more money in your wallet at the end of each month.
