Christine Pullein-Thompson (the company is run by Christine's daughter) The Pullein-Thompson Archive -a blog which reviews the The Ghost in the Top Meadow.

Reprinted in hardback by Collins as part of the Collins Pony Library number Reprinted in hardback by Swift. Reprinted in paperback by Armada. At last Noel and her friends are off to pony club camp. There are plenty of laughs as Christopher loses his cool trying to win the camp competition, Nicholas falls head over heels in love with Noel and Gay turns match-maker. A very funny light-hearted read. First editions are rare. The full series was also republished in hardback with pictorial boards by Swift, once again fairly hard editions to find. Unfortunately for American and Australian collectors, the series is harder to come across overseas and can be more expensive. Mainly adventure stories set on moors which seem to be an amalgamation of Bodmin and Exmoor. New characters are introduced and older ones phased out in the later books, which has not proved a popular move with readers. The earlier books in the series are the best. Reprinted in paperback by J A Allen under new title. First in the series about Frances and Louisa Burnett and their friends The Mitchells and the Jacksons who all live on the moors and enjoy riding their ponies together. In this story the children are asked to help with a crew making a film about smugglers, but is there something more sinister behind the film making? Jackson has an accident the children all pitch in to help run his trekking business. But one of the trekkers, a mysterious boy called N. Hutchinson is terrified of some strange men who say they are his uncles. What is the truth behind the mystery? Frances has a new pony, the high spirited Orlando. Because of his unruly behaviour her friends are not sure about her choice. However it is Orlando who is vital in solving the mystery of old Mrs. There are rumours of a mysterious ghostly horse running on the moors. The children, however, are certain that the horse is real and are determined to catch him and solve the mystery. Frances and Louisa team up with some new friends to search for a mysterious treasure. Can be hard to find. Sukey and her friends are certain that a missing stallion is being kept at a nearby farm and set out to solve the mystery. The first four were reprinted as paperbacks and are fairly easy to find in the UK. The last three in series were not reprinted and are rarer, with Treasure on the Moor being the hardest to find. These three can be expensive but price does vary a lot. All the series are hard to find in the USA, Australia and elsewhere. Woodbury Pony Club Series: A new set of Pony Club characters go through various trials and tribulations. Not to be confused with the earlier Pony Club series. The Woodbury Pony Club are hopeless and the joke of the neighbourhood. But surprises are in store for the children. The Pony Club members take on their deadly rivals the Cranford Vale team in an attempt to win a gruelling tetrathlon. But can they beat their brilliant rivals? The Pony Club members are off on a three day trek over the Downs.
