Top 5 Things to See and Do in Austin

1. Listen to music Austin is famous for its music scene, and there are many opportunities here to listen to some world-class, independent music. Pretty much every bar in the city showcases music. Located in Zilker Park see below , the natural springs provide a great respite from the summertime heat. The museum is home to some interesting artifacts, and they also host regular special exhibitions. Admission is 13 USD for adults, with discounts available for students, seniors, and military personnel.
- Cathedral of Junk The cathedral was built by Vince Hannemann, who sits around while people hang out with his stuff. The Cathedral of Junk is exactly that – a bunch of junk. There are towers of TVs, bikes, old refrigerators, tires, hubcaps, and more. I found the place great for families.

1. Admission is 12 USD. Sample hot sauce at Taste of Joy This hot sauce shop serves hundreds of different kinds of hot sauces. If you like hot sauce, come here. They offer free tastings for many of the sauces. If you want to go crazy, try all the sauces on the shelves aptly shaped like a coffin. They are for serious spicy addicts only!
- Visit a Whole Foods Whole Foods, the nationwide chain, started in Austin and the flagship store is located here in the city. This particular store features a wine bar, smoothie bar, beer locker, roof terrace, giant salad bars, and seemingly endless supplies of vegetables, food, and in-store restaurants.
- Visit the waterfront at dusk to watch these beauties head out for their nightly foraging.
- Zilker Park Zilker Park is in the heart of south Austin. The park offers many different types of outdoor activities such as hiking, biking, kayaking, jogging, and anything else you can do in a park.
- Barton Springs see above is here as well. Austin has some incredible offerings when it comes barbeque, including La Barbeque and Franklins. Get there early to avoid the worst of the waiting! There are trails around the lake for hiking and cycling, too.
- See a movie at the Ritz This was the first movie theater in Austin to be built for talking films it opened in ! There is an attached comedy club and music hall, too.
- Swim in Deep Eddy This man-made pool is fed from a nearby well with non-chlorinated water. In the summer they show family movies here, projected onto an inflatable screen.
- Take a craft beer tour Austin is home to a growing number of craft beer breweries, most of which offer tours of their facilities with samples, of course! If you find a local beer you like be sure to check out their brewery. There are also companies like ATXcursions that organize tours of multiple breweries. If you take a tour organized by a third party, expect to pay around 70 USD per person.
- Try an escape room Austin is home to a few great escape rooms, which are a fun way to spend an afternoon. The Escape Game Austin is one of the top-rated rooms in the country and offers some really neat challenges. Admission is usually around USD per person.
- Go two-stepping Country dancing can be found all over the city, with the White Horse being the most famous spot. If you go on Wednesday, they even give free two-step lessons!
- The Broken Spoke is another popular place to dance, too. There is live music and all-night happy hour.
- Get weird on Rainey Street This nightlife area is filled with old houses that have been recently converted into bars. Personally, I hate coming here on the weekends: I find the scene a little too wild for me though you may not!
- Grab a cocktail Beer and cheap drinks reign supreme in Austin, however, there is a growing cocktail bar scene in the city.
