Housed in the mansion's former dining room, the Café Jacquemart-André is the most beautiful tea room in Paris. All day, you can break for a snack just a stone's throw from the Champs-Élysées and the department stores.

This particular mansion is an extraordinary witness of this Parisian aristocratic life of the 19th century. The imperial aristocracy decided to settle down in that location after the architectural reconstruction of the district and completely rethought by the famous prefect Hausmann. The beauty of the location on Boulevard Hausmann is unique. A special immersion in the aristocratic universe This particular mansion is an extraordinary witness of this Parisian aristocratic life of the 19th century. The author wrote so many scenes about aristocratic life in Paris that the link could be done immediately. Elegant duchesses, princesses and comtesses wirling around in the large living room but also in the music room and the splendid winter garden. One can find a great resemblance to the private mansion of the collector Henri Clay Frick and his mansion located in the heart of New York. The large drawing-room, the music-room, being no more than a single room for receptions and balls. The Grand salon The music room The decoration brings together from the beginning furniture and decorative objects from the 18th century. The music room is a jewel of the second empire style with its walls of red stretched fabric, dark wood furniture and painted ceilings. On the ceiling, an Apollo protector of the arts illustrates the spirit of the place. A characteristic of Napoleon III style in the art of receiving. The Winter Garden with mirrors The staircase is decorated with marble, stone but also iron and bronze. The double staircase A magnificent canopy reveals sculptures, mirrors, green plants and a beautiful double-staircase. The canopy and the Cornice The dining room Today it has become a tea room very popular with the Parisians. The ceiling is also decorated with a very beautiful fresco by Tiepolo. A very simple portrait of Christ with a simple light and shadows. It gives great mystery to the scene. A representation of Christ that reveals his identity to two disciples encountered after his resurrection. The scene takes place in the small village of Emmaus near Jerusalem.
