Wolf Garnett had been buried that morning. His year long hunt was over and he wasn't sure how he felt about that. Garnett was an outlaw whose gang had held up a stage last year and Garnett had viciously whipped the horses and sent the driver-less stage on a wild race such that it ran off the trail.

However, during the summer before his senior year of high school, Garnett was in the general vicinity of a fight between black and white students. Although not directly involved, Garnett was one of three students arrested for second-degree lynching, a charge that was expunged through a pre-trial intervention. He was also named Mr. Basketball for the state of Illinois after averaging 20.5 points, 11.5 rebounds and 2.5 blocked shots. In four years of high school, Garnett posted an impressive 2,000 points, 1,000 rebounds and 200 blocked shots. In high school, Garnett played alongside Ronnie Fields, who also became a professional basketball player. Garnett initially came off the bench in his rookie year, but moved into the starting lineup soon after Saunders became head coach. In his rookie year, Garnett and fellow newcomer Tom Gugliotta carried the scoring load. At the time, Garnett was the youngest NBA player in history at 19 years and 11 months of age. During the season, Garnett posted improving averages of 20.5 points, 11.5 rebounds and 2.5 blocked shots. Despite the furor over his new contract, Garnett continued to improve, averaging 22.5 points, 12.5 rebounds and 3.5 blocked shots. Again, he was an All-Star, and the Timberwolves finished with their first winning record in franchise history 45-37 for the season. For the second consecutive year, the young Timberwolves bowed out of the playoffs in the first round, this time losing 3-2 to the Seattle SuperSonics and superstar point guard Gary Payton. The off-season started poorly for the Timberwolves though as point per game scorer Tom Gugliotta left for the Phoenix Suns. Garnett as a member of the Minnesota Timberwolves In the lockout-shortened season that followed, Garnett broke through as a superstar. Putting up stats of 28.5 points, 12.5 rebounds and 3.5 blocked shots. Although the Wolves received two-time All-Star Terrell Brandon in return, they were not able to overcome the discord and limped into the playoffs as the eighth seed with a 25-25 record. In the 2001-02 NBA season, Garnett continued his notable play, averaging 28.5 points, 12.5 rebounds and 3.5 blocked shots. MVP and division champions. In the 2002-03 season, Garnett posted another notable season, his averages of 28.5 points, 12.5 rebounds and 3.5 blocked shots. However, the Timberwolves bowed out in the first round for the sixth consecutive time, this time getting swept 3-0 by the Dallas Mavericks led by Michael Finley, Steve Nash and Dirk Nowitzki. In the 2003-04 season, things finally seemed to come together for Garnett. In past years, the Wolves had practically been a one-man show, but now, the Timberwolves had made two valuable acquisitions: In addition, defensive center Ervin Johnson complemented the inconsistent Michael Olowokandi. Powered by the best supporting cast in his career, Garnett averaged 28.5 points, 12.5 rebounds, 3.5 blocked shots and leading the league rebounds, Garnett was named the league Most Valuable Player for the first time in his career. There, playmaker Cassell went down with a back injury. With reserve point guard Hudson also injured, the Timberwolves alternated between third playmaker Darrick Martin and shooting guard Fred Hoiberg at the "one", or even running Garnett himself as point forward or a real point guard. The Los Angeles Lakers pulled off a 4-2 victory in the series. Frustration. In the 2004-05 season, Garnett was named to the All-NBA Second Team, [3] but the Timberwolves failed to make the playoffs for the first time in eight years with a record of 44-38. The 2005-06 season brought more frustration for Garnett. During the off-season, Glen Taylor admitted that although he had planned on retaining Garnett, he would finally listen to trade offers. Garnett dunking a ball in a game against the Washington Wizards. Garnett said that he was proud to be a part of the Celtics, and hoped to continue its proud tradition and basketball success. He made his Boston debut with a strong performance against the Washington Wizards, with 22 points and 20 rebounds. During that championship season, Garnett and Celtics legend Bill Russell developed a relationship, which Garnett credited as a major influence in helping him succeed during his first season as a Celtic. On October 31, 2006, Garnett became the youngest player in NBA history to reach 1,000 career games, at 32 years and 111 days. Following the All-Star Game, during a game against the Utah Jazz, Garnett strained his right knee late in the second quarter. The injury occurred on February 19, 2007, while attempting to go up for an alley-oop. Upon his return from the injury, he averaged 9 points and 4 rebounds. In the 2007-08 season, Garnett and the Celtics, joined by newly signed free agent Rasheed Wallace, struggled with injuries and inconsistency throughout much of the regular season and earned the fourth seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs. Despite being written off by nearly every major sports analyst, the Celtics elevated their play and consistently, and dominated opponents much as they did during their championship run. The Finals went to a decisive seventh game in Los Angeles, where the Celtics led well into the third quarter before the Lakers mounted a comeback and held on for the victory. On December 30, , Garnett injured his right knee after he tried to dunk. He missed two weeks with the injury. Garnett returned on January 17, to face the Orlando Magic. After sweeping the New York Knicks in the first round, they faced the Heat in the semi-finals. However, the Heat won the next two games, winning the series 4â€”1. Garnett was not selected for the All-Star game for the first time in 11 years. After, however, Boston quickly became one of the best teams in the league, finishing the second half of the season with a 24â€”10 record, entering the playoffs as the fourth seed in the Eastern Conference with a 39â€”27 record. Boston made a deep run in the playoffs, going all the way to the Eastern Conference Finals. They faced the Atlanta Hawks in the first round, defeating them in six games. Boston then defeated the Philadelphia 76ers after a challenging seven-game series. The Celtics lost the first two games, but came back strong to win the next three games. However, the Heat were too strong in Games 6 and 7, defeating the Celtics 4â€”3. Garnett found a resurgence in the playoffs, averaging In reaching the milestone, Garnett also joined Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Karl Malone as the only players to reach 25, points, 14, rebounds and 5, assists. He reached the milestone in the third quarter of a â€”99 road loss to the Detroit Pistons. On February 19, , Garnett agreed to waive his no-trade clause in order to be traded back to Minnesota in exchange for Thaddeus Young. He finished the game with four defensive boards to give him 11, for his career, three ahead of Malone. Due to the wedding, Garnett did not take part in the Athens Olympic Games.
