Lostprophets / l ɛː s t ɛː p r ɛː f ɛː t s / were a Welsh rock band from Pontypridd, Wales formed in , founded by vocalist and lyricist Ian Watkins, bassist (later guitarist) Mike Lewis, drummer Mike Chiplin and guitarist Lee Gaze.

History[edit] Early years

The band formed in in Pontypridd, Wales. Lostprophets started out as part of the fledgling South Wales scene playing gigs at venues across Wales including T. The band recorded three demos during this time: These were produced by Stuart Richardson , [7] who joined the band as bassist for the latter recording. The Fake Sound of Progress also included the addition of DJ Stepzak , who would remain with the band for around a year. All of the EPs are out of print, and are very rare. The band caught the attention of the two music publishers Kerrang! Dragon Ninja " and "Kobrakai". Dragon Ninja , while the second was an alternative spelling of Cobra Kai , the name of the karate dojo in the Karate Kid movies. This provoked hostility from certain members of the audience, who were upset at Lostprophets inclusion on such a bill. The band subsequently toured with Ozzfest , played at Glastonbury and the Reading and Leeds Festival. UK and Never Mind the Buzzcocks. Start Something Stuart Richardson performing with Lostprophets at Leeds Festival After the extensive touring cycle for The Fake Sound of Progress finally ended, the band took a brief break before beginning the process of writing new material for Start Something at Frontline Studios in Caerphilly , Wales. TV and Scuzz in the UK. The band themselves even conceded in interviews that the singing pattern bore an undeniable similarity to the Adamski song " Killer ". The band rescheduled the cancelled UK shows, with the exception of their scheduled appearance at the Reading and Leeds Festivals, stating in magazine interviews that honouring those commitments would have meant leaving the recording studio while the album was only half completed. Worldwide the album has sold 2. The tour for this record culminated on 21 November , at a sold out show in Cardiff International Arena. Liberation Transmission On 19 June , founding member Mike Chiplin left the group to pursue other musical opportunities. He has also opened up his own practice studio for young people to start bands. The remaining members began working on material for the next album. Lostprophets began a full-fledged UK tour on 3 July The band followed this with another UK tour in November. Originally the band stated that they wanted the album released in ; however, due to both touring and being unhappy with the results of their work in the studio, the band did not keep to their original release plan. Throughout the earlier part of , the band performed several dates, including Download Festival which they headlined on the Sunday night, V Festival and Rock am Ring and Rock im Park , as well as a small amount of performances around the UK. During this time, Kerrang! It was subsequently released on 12 October and reached No. This was followed by " Where We Belong ", which was released on 4 January The Doncaster date to the UK tour was cancelled and refunded, but no reason was given for the cancellation. The Port Talbot date of the tour was postponed and moved to a different venue due to a fire at the Afan Lido Leisure Centre. The show took place on 1 May at the Cardiff International Arena. The band also played at the Reading and Leeds Festival. Weapons album In early , the band rented a house in Norfolk that served as their studio while composing a demo and pre-producing for a new album. Supported by a subsequent tour in the UK. Lostprophets played select shows in Vans Warped Tour They played from 12 July through 5 August. Lostprophets played in the Cardiff Motorpoint Arena on 28 April to promote their new album Weapons, and played their second studio album Start Something in its entirety. Three videos were released from "Weapons". On 3 December , Watkins tweeted, "En route to the big smoke to shoot our new musical video. However, a finished video was never released. In response, the other members of the group posted a message on their official website, stating that they were "in a state of shock" and were "learning about the details of the investigation along with you," concluding that: The post was signed by all members of the band except Watkins. They clarified that they had been unaware of the crimes Watkins was committing, and while highlighting that he was "a difficult character" and that during the final years of the band, working with him had become "a constant, miserable challenge", they still "never imagined him capable of behaviour of the type he has now admitted". They also urged any other victims to contact the authorities. No Devotion On 25 April , it was confirmed by ex- Thursday frontman Geoff Rickly that he would be working with the remaining band members on their new project, from a record label perspective through his own label, Collect Records, as a producer and also joining them as a vocalist. The song was removed from the site after three days.

Watkins, 36, from Pontypridd, pleaded guilty at Cardiff Crown Court last month to 13 child sex offences. His two co-defendants, who are the mothers of children he abused, were jailed for 14 and 17 years. Sentencing the three, Mr Justice Royce said the case broke "new ground" and "plunged into new depths of depravity". Watkins was sentenced to 29 years in prison with a further six years on licence, but he will be eligible for parole after serving two thirds of the prison term. He was sentenced alongside the two mothers known as Woman A and Woman B who also pleaded guilty to child abuse charges. Woman A was jailed for 14 years and Woman B was sentenced to 17 years in prison. Watkins admitted the attempted rape and sexual assault of a child under 13 but pleaded not guilty to rape. He also admitted conspiring to rape a child, three counts of sexual assault involving children, seven involving taking, making or possessing indecent images of children and one of possessing an extreme pornographic image involving a sex act on an animal. During sentencing, Mr Justice Royce said: Ian Watkins has been given what is called an extended sentence. It is used for public protection in the case of offenders who are deemed particularly dangerous. His total sentence is 35 years, 29 of which will be served in prison plus a six year period served in the community on licence. If he were to breach the terms of that licence, he could be immediately returned to prison. He will have to serve two thirds of the 29 year custodial part of his sentence before he can be considered for release by the Parole Board - it does not mean he will be released at that point. At the time of release from prison, the six year extension on licence kicks in. The legislation says the extension period is "of such length as the court considers necessary for the purpose of protecting members of the public from serious harm". The judge said Watkins had a "corrupting influence", and had shown a "complete lack of remorse". He also said Watkins posed a significant risk to the public in particular to women with young children. He told Woman A: She told the court how he had developed an "obsession" with filming himself having sex and had become addicted to drugs at the age of 16. Watkins was on minute suicide watch while on remand, the court heard. Jonathan Fuller QC, defending for Woman A, said she felt genuine remorse and was devastated by what she had done. Christine Laing QC, defending Woman B, said she was clearly remorseful for her behaviour and the loss of her child was her punishment. Meanwhile, South Wales Police are investigating whether Watkins also committed offences in Germany and America and the IPCC has confirmed it was investigating three police forces over the case. Media playback is unsupported on your device Media captionJoanne Mjedzelics says she repeatedly reported Watkins to police Detective Chief Inspector Peter Doyle, senior investigating officer, said the sentences reflected the gravity of the crimes and the investigation uncovered "the most disturbing child abuse evidence" he had seen in his 28 years as an officer. South Yorkshire, Bedfordshire and South Wales are being investigated over information received about Watkins prior to his arrest in December Three other forces, Essex, West Yorkshire and the Metropolitan Police, also supplied information that they had been given about Watkins for the inquiry but are not currently under investigation. A member of the public reported an allegation of child abuse against Watkins in October to Bedfordshire Police. And he said how he was sure there were other child victims. Suzanne Thomas, Senior Crown Prosecutor at CPS Wales, said Watkins was the ringleader and the defendants conspired to commit "appalling crimes of abuse against young and defenceless victims". They too have received sentences that reflect their admissions of guilt for these offences.
