Every Saturday I write down the funny things I hear. Paul is my co " worker. Saturday 27th February , 3. Jim 62, works in a secondhand electricals shop, Paul 59, shop assistant, Assi Ahsan owner 45, Anka 22, works in a potato processing factory. They are so large that he cannot fit through the door so he gets wedged in it. Assi is struggling furiously in the doorway: Neither Paul nor Jim move a muscle. Jim is leaning on the counter and rolling a cigarette. He glances at Paul. Paul is meticulously rearranging boxes of cigarette papers on the counter so that they are all stacked neatly. He glances at Jim. They both glance at me. After wrestling the boxes through the doorway they are placed in front of the counter. Assi sits down on one of them and dabs his brow with a handkerchief. He is of indeterminate age but on one of his birth certificates it says that he was born in Got some quality stuff to go out Paul. Did you get any mouse traps off that guy? I told you Assi. People are coming in every day asking for mouse traps. Mouse traps this mouse traps bloody that. He opens one of the boxes with a pen " knife and folds back the lid. Thomas the Tank Engine innit?! The trains are blue but that is their only resemblance to Thomas the Tank Engine. No, these is for the kids train sets you know? They love it all this Thomas and the Tank Engine and all that. Here " have you seen this? What does that say? He hands one of the boxes to Assi and indicates the writing on it. Track train or something" here Paul" read this. Got em off a Polish guy who has a stall on the Saturday market. All the stuff I put on that list for you. Alright, alright" fucking hell Paul. Keep your hair on innit? Just what we need" How much are you putting them out for? More like two " fifty. I meant two pound fifty! Fuck off and break free out of it. Anka enters the shop. Jim directs his singing at her and she hurries out of his way. Assi opens the second box and pulls out a statuette of a man with black hair and a thick mustache. The figure is wearing a dinner jacket and bow tie. There is nothing to indicate that it is a statue of Freddy Mercury. It could be any man with black hair and a mustache. Somewhere prominent you know? Maybe clear out some of these dog foods and stuff and have them here near the counter innit, where people can see them? I thought you said these were Freddy Mercury? Looks more like Cliff Thorburn. Who the snooker player? He was played by Tom Selleck! God this is like working in a fucking old folks home. Says so on the bottom innit? Yeah, it says Freddy Mercury statue. The guy told me. Anka approaches the counter. She looks at the statue and points at it. She says something in a foreign language. My sentiments entirely my darling. What beautiful eyes you have. Anka says something to Jim. He shows her the base of the statue. She nods and laughs. Anka holding up one figure: To Jim and Paul: The Polish love Freddy Mercury. What are you talking about? One of the biggest bands in Poland! She is a bit startled but shows him the base of the statue and says something in Polish. Speaking very slowly and a bit too loudly: Royal Dolchester " top brand. By appointment to the royalty. Prince Charles has got a couple of these. Do you know Prince Charles? He puts his fingers behind his ears so that they stick out. Anka looks very puzzled. Anka says of her purchase: I will give it to my husband as a joke. It is so bad. We can just put a sticker over the bottom innit? Depends which one sells better. Some people are into snooker. Some people like music. Some people like both! Overheard anything funny lately? Please share it with us below.

Friday, the day before I left, came around. I only had to get through 10 hours watching my little tots, plan activities and crafts for the upcoming week when I was gone, and then I was out of that building so fast. I knew ahead of time that I was going to need to try to stay up as long as possible to fight the jet leg and time difference once I arrived. So what better way to do that than to go out with friends. March 19, My alarm went off at 4: I was tired and confused but soon realized I was going to Japan! I mean it would take me a full 24 hour day to get there but hey I was going to Japan! The first leg of this trip I was flying solo and would meet Marisa in Minneapolis. Once arriving at the airport I got my bags checked, went through security and sat at my gate until 6: I found my seat on the little 2 by 2 plane, put on the Hamilton soundtrack and passed out. I decided that I would just go straight to my gate and wait the 4 hours out, I hopped on the tram from C - G, walked the mall area they have and found my gate. The amount of people, in which was a very fancy international flight gate, was ridiculous. So I left and found the gate Marisa would be arriving at and found a nice couch to lounge on. Her flight was leaving when I was landing, so I was by myself for a good 2 hours. Once she landed she started freaking out because she thought they were getting ready to board our flight, she forgot to take in to account that we gained an hour while traveling to different time zone. Before we headed to our gate I needed to grab some chickfila, the only downfall was they were out of the chickfila sauce! Marisa grabbed a bagel sandwich and ended up grabbing the wrong one at the counter. She ended up taking it back up to the counter and got the right one. We sat and ate, then walked the whole airport to get to G from C. This was the perfect time to gush over Hamilton, we both got the soundtrack a week before not knowing that we both were obsessed. Hamilton will be mentioned A LOT in the report. I think everyone should listen to it! So yeah check Hamilton out! Once arriving to the gate we planned out when we were sleeping, Marisa took artsy photos for instagram and by the time we knew it it was time to board! The 12 hour flight was upon, ready or not. Every seat got a pillow, blanket, eye mask, meal menu, and headphones. The best part about this flight was that it was 2 by 4 by 2, and we were lucky enough to just have us to in a row. I also am really proud of delta for having the Hamilton soundtrack under their show tunes because Marisa and I joked around saying that it would be there. Prepare for take off. Once in the air we were given warm towels, we both watched The Intern and had to try to push play at the same time. Near the end of the movie our dinner came, you get an option between 2 meals. This flight was ratatouille or beef tip curry, I went with the curry and was surprised with how much food we were given. On top of the main dish we got a roll, caesar salad, shrimp cocktail, and a brownie. The beef was surprisingly really good. The couple in front of us probably had 5 bottles just between the both of them by the end of the flight. After the Intern it was time for a Hamilton jam sesh, too bad everyone around us were sleeping because we were putting on a really good show. My 3 hour nap the night before caught up with me. So I put on Inside Out and passed out for maybe 2 hours. A pretzel bread turkey sandwich, cookies, banana and a water bottle. And once again fell asleep afterwards. This time it was harder to sleep and I finally fell asleep too late. The last hour was the worst, I was so tired making me really crabby. They were starting to pass out the last meal and I knew I needed to wake up. But after a dark 11 hour flight the lights were not my friend. The last meal was either chicken or egg.

Although the whole 6: With that being said we were at the bus stop at 6: Where the train was waiting for us right when we got to the platform. We took the not even 5 minute ride to the Disney station and saw the Disney monorail from the train. Once getting down from the crowded station we had to decided either to walk the 15 minutes to Disney Sea or take the monorail. The monorail costs money to take so we decided to follow the herd of people running to Disney sea. The 15 minute walk to the park definitely helped with waking us up. However the entrance to the park was anything but extravagant. When we got to the park entrance it was already jam packed. This however is normal for Tokyo disney. To me it was like christmas crowds in WDW and I was ready to accept the challenge of getting as much done as I could. But it was better to be allowed in the park and not wait the day of to buy tickets and have them sold out just to have a hard ticket. We still had about 20 minutes before the park opened and those were the longest 20 minutes of my life. We made it through bag check, passed the ticket booths, and packed in like sardines at the turnstiles. This is when a few things happened 1. We realized no kids go to school, most of the guests seemed to be group of kids and teens 2. This is when someone basically cuts the line in search of their party. Larry where are you?! They go all out outfit wise for a day in the parks. Mickey and the band came out and the park was officially opened for the day! The one thing I did not like about it was you either make the dash into the park to get a fastpass or you take in the moment walking into the park for the first time. I went with getting the fastpass. What is DisneySea like? We wasted 1 minute to take a quick selfie in front of the world before joining the crowd in the mad dash. There are barrier after barrier of CMs lined up to try to slow the crowds down holding signs to tell them to walk not run. Most people flocked to Toy Story Mania, if you thought the mania run in florida was bad thats nothing compared to Japans. Instead we made a dash for a Tower of terror fp. Alicia took our passes and ran to get in the line for fastpasses, which was also already creating a really nice long line. This was truly the first moment I had to take in that I was finally here. After finding Alicia we took a fast pace walk to Journey to the center of the earth. Since the attractions are so spread out in this park it gave me the chance to see some of the park. The strange thing was how I had no clue where I was going. Everything was new too me. And I was so grateful to have Alicia here with us this day because she knew where she was going. We walked through the American Waterfront and Port Discovery, which side note they play epcot music in Port Discovery and its really strange. Then we hopped on over to Mysterious Island and got in a long line that we could only hope was for the Center of The Earth. When we officially got to the main entrance of the ride the wait time was at minutes, 3 hours my friends. And once again apparently this is normal, so we might as well stick it out. There are so many twist and turns and for me never being on it I had no clue when we were getting close to the front. Alicia was kind enough to document our wait time on her snapchat, this also was nice because it showed us how long we ended up waiting. While waiting a going into every alcove possible we noticed that there was a group with bunny ears further up from us. This became a game of where are the bunnies? And how did they possibly get over there. We also talked about everything we wanted to accomplish today. Then came the question where do you want to eat lunch and dinner? I had a few options picked out after reading all the menus. So since I was the only one who did this we decided to walk around and read some menus afterwards. Once entering the elevator, the lights flicker, and you hear the clicking and clanging like you are going down into the center of the earth. After your quick ride you enter another room and line to board your car. Alicia warned us a head of time that the CM will tell us to take your bags off way before entering any attraction. Also their way of telling us is by tapping on their shoulders. After awhile you learn to take it off before a CM notices you have one. We were next climbing aboard our vehicle and off to see what lies in the center of the earth. During your journey on board a unique subterranean vehicle, the volcano suddenly shakes and erupts, taking you where even Captain Nemo has never been before. I was literally pooping my pants because it was so funny. Overall this attraction was pretty cool and the sceneries and details were on point. However it was too short for my liking, once it got fast paced and exciting it just sort of ended. No luck on Mysterious Island so we had to take a trip over to the Arabian Coast.

Article by Wendy McCance The world is full of magic and mystery. I take on the world with an attitude of acceptance. For years now, I have on occasion seen a white feather when facing extreme doubt or anxiety. On a few lucky occasions, I have seen a white feather when I have no concerns whatsoever. What does it all mean? Well, when I have concerns or anxiety and see a white feather, I trust that I am on the right path and continue on the way I have been going. It feels as though an angel is watching over me, letting me know that, yes I am going about something in the right way and that I am protected. When I see a feather and I have nothing stressing me out, it seems I am about to have some sort of luck. I know this sounds odd and many years ago if someone had said all of this to me, I would have been a little more than a bit skeptical about the whole matter. What makes this situation rather fascinating is that my husband has witnessed seeing white feathers with me several times and has seen the same types of outcomes play out. One of the craziest memories was a time when I was sitting on the sofa with my husband having a talk about our relationship when a white feather floated down right between where me and my husband sat. I have so many stories I can share about times a white feather was seen that by now, I just accept the whole situation without question. I just get a feeling of happiness and security each time one is found. Yesterday was one such occasion. I had gone into the bathroom to take a shower and get ready for work. I was sitting on the toilet before getting in the shower and as I sat there, something floated down and landed on my shirt. I looked down to see what had fallen and realized that what I picked off my shirt was a white feather. I was sitting still, no air was moving and I was in the bathroom where would a feather even come from? About the size of the pin portion of a thumb tack, very white in color and very full in shape actually, quite pretty. I racked my brain trying to figure out why I saw a feather. Maybe, it would be a day filled with luck. It was an exciting way to start the day. I have been doing some work up at our club as a fill-in manager and yesterday was my last day working for the season. It was a good day. The employees were reminiscing about the summer and everyone was talking about missing everyone else. Everyone was in a good mood and the day was easy and very pleasant. In the middle of my shift, I got a call on my cell phone. A man I had never spoken to or whose name I had never heard of was calling to let me know I got a job working with a publisher. I had been working on getting this opportunity for a few months. We would be working together on this project. As we spoke, we also discussed my qualifications and a possibility for me to do some work outside of this project with his company. Now you have to understand, the two areas I have been focusing on and hoping beyond hope to get some business was within the publishing and music industries. And, here I was getting an opportunity to possibly work in both areas. I was beyond excited. The call came out of nowhere. All I could think about was that I saw a feather earlier in the day and the feather was indeed bringing me good luck. I began to see a pattern emerge. Later in the evening, I got an email from a company looking to do a sponsored post on my blog and just the day before, I had received an email asking for pricing on two assignments that had been in discussions. Money was also the theme at work where I was doing fill-in work. I was asked if I would be interested in a much bigger position for the following year. It seemed that as one source of income was ending, others were picking right up. That feather helped me to slow down and absorb all that was presenting itself. I refocused and have a much better sense of direction as I head into the school year. Who knows if there is really a definite connection or if my mind is creating a positive reaction when I see them. Have you ever had an experience like this?

There are some incredible people in this glorious world. I have learned SO much! The more we live gratefully, the happier we feel! Who knew it was so simple? We just have to be grateful. And we just have to raise grateful children. All I want for my children is for them to be happy people. I want the best for them, of course, but most of all, I want them to be happy. Surely they are living their best life if they are living a happy life. Happiness is all we really needâ€¦ to be genuinely happy with what we have and who we are. So, we have started a new family tradition in The Sunny House. Every evening at the dinner table, we each have a turn to tell each other one thing that happened in the day that we are grateful for. It is so interesting how the children have taken to this daily ritual. At first, they struggled with it. Slowly they became better at itâ€¦ they were grateful for their things, their toys and their belongings. My Good Man and I resisted the urge to encourage them to be grateful for more important things like the people in their lives and the experiences that make them feel good. Now, more than likely, they are grateful for a person or what a person did for them or something nice that happened to them. The second part of the ritual is telling each other one thing that we did that day that made someone else feel grateful. This has been wonderful and has had amazing implications for the children and for My Good Man and me. It feels so good. And makes us grateful, which in turn, would you know, makes us fell happy. We all love this coming together to express our gratitude and, more often than not, it sparks wonderful dinnertime conversations.

7: The Magic of Happiness: How To Reduce Stress And Be Happy Every Day by Wiktorija Maj

MAGIC of HAPPINESS is an original song sung by Kaori Nazuka as Tenri Ayukawa. Translated by GreenMoriyama.

If I keep on saying to myself that I cannot do a certain thing, it is possible that I may end by really becoming incapable of doing it. On the contrary, if I have the belief that I can do it, I shall surely acquire the capacity to do it even if I may not have it at the beginning. I am bless and bless is me. I am love and love is me. I am abundance and abundance is me. I am prosperity and prosperity is me. I am happiness and happiness is me. I am strong and strong is me. I am powerful and powerful is me. I am success and success is me. I am beauty and beauty is me. I am peace and peace is me. I am inspiration and inspiration is me. I am thankfulness and thankfulness is me. I am freedom and freedom is me. I am vitality and vitality is me. I am perfection and perfection is me. I am gorgeous and gorgeous is me. I am ready and ready is me. I am kindness and kindness is me. I am self-respect and self-respect is me. When we could be only happiness, then we will feel only happiness. We would receive only happiness since only happiness we would recognize. We would attract only happiness. Only happiness would stick to us. We would be a form that holds only happiness. To all other feelings we would just remain immune. We would give only happiness to others. We could not give anything else. We could not give nothing since all the time we would give happiness. We could not stop ourselves from not giving happiness to all the people, no matter their age, language, skin color, social status, disabilities, abilities, level of studies, thinking. Because we would be only Happiness. See now you are left with only Happiness. We give happiness to others when we overflow from within ourselves with happiness. That means we would feel, in almost every corner of our inner self, the feeling of happiness, and then more. More means that we multiply our happiness. We multiply our happiness when we feel grateful while we feel the feeling of happiness. Therefore to overflow with happiness we need a simple reason for being happy and practice gratitude simultaneous. When you overflow with happiness, you are happiness and happiness is you. The same process applies to everything else. To overflow with love, first you start practicing feeling the love and then you multiply that feeling by being grateful. When you overflow with love, you are Love and Love is you. A little secret to help you start practicing Love is: Therefore, when you are aware of a problem, first transform your level of awareness and then, try to solve that awareness. Most of the time, when you have an emotional struggle, the main reason is because you are focusing too much on a certain negative word. For the moment, you find yourself located at the level of awareness of that negative word. The solution is to develop your awareness for the positive word, which is the opposite of the negative word. The transition can be made with the below Step 2, where you are negating the positive world, you are saying not together with the positive word. Therefore you can jump through levels that take you to the positive feeling represented by the positive word, when you start from the negative feeling represented by the negative word, by taking the following simple steps: Step 1 Name a single word for your negative emotion. This is the easiest part because you are complaining about it in your mind, so you know what you are struggling with. For example name it like: Then acknowledge it saying: Take the next step 2. Step 2 Replace the negative word with two words, composed of not and the opposite of the negative word. For sad we have happy, therefore you will have not happy. Spend some time by focusing on these words. You can repeat to yourself: In this stage, you will see that your brain will come with a list of happy things that you lack in the moment. This is precisely what you need. You can write it down and look at your treasure. The list is a treasure because now you have a list with things that make you happy and you can start doing them and start being happy. But before going through the list, make step 3 also. Step 3 Start repeating in your mind only the positive word, without not. In our example you can say the word happy. You can also say happiness. Say in your mind the words at least 35 times, and then increase the reinforcement to 40, 60, , , times until it makes sense to you, until your brain starts to reflect and focus on these words. To make it easier and more powerful, write it down on a piece of paper. You can write the word happiness as many times as you need, until you feel the awareness of the word. Write it with big letters this always has the biggest impact and even in different colors. Most of the time we all search the feeling of relief, and in this way you can offer to yourself some self-relief. If you do not know and really understand what a positive word stands for, then look it up in the dictionary, research it on internet and read articles and books about that word there are many books about loving-kindness, acceptance, gratitude, equanimity, warm-heartedness, self-love, relief, abundance, peace of mind, mindfulness, confidence, happiness. If you do not know positive words then put positive words in google and click on the first list that comes in your search. Inspire yourself from this list whenever you feel you need a positive word. The direct link of this list of positive words is: When we grow up we need to take the responsibility of being our own teachers. And when a positive word weakens in our mind, we need to give ourselves the task to reinforce that word. Read in a dictionary what it means. Increase your awareness by reading articles on the Internet about the word happiness. Read books about happiness. There are a lot these days. Find and learn all the positive words that are connected to the word happiness. There are so unbelievably many related words to happiness. But I like to stress on the things I did right, because there are certain things that I like to look at from a positive standpoint that are just positive reinforcement. I will again give you another homework which is to build your own personalized happy moment: Make your own blessings replacing the sparkles with your own words: I recommend you to read throughout the chapters, taking each sentence, one by one. The sentences are arranged in a certain serene flow but can also be read separately. The writing of this book has begun with my daily writings. I had some blissful, full of love, mesmerizing days when I just felt that I want to connect my own being with positive, high and strong words. Then connect myself with everything around me, connect my consciousness with the reality outside me. In this state I began to write this book. Books by the same author:

The Magic Study of Happiness By Charles Simic. In the smallest theater in the world the bread crumbs speak. It's a mystery play on the lost subject of paradise.

He has a nice, helping personality and is not afraid to help girls in need. His two close friends are Hachisuke Takamizo, and Jun Watarase, who seems to have a crush on him. When he was younger he was able to do some magic in order to help Haruhi who was being bullied, but now he professes that he cannot use magic though in reality he still can. Additionally, he seems to be put off by the notion of using magic whatsoever, even if it is able to help people. Eventually, he realizes that magic can bring happiness if used in the right way and transfers to the magic section. In the end, he learned that his real mother is Suzuri Minagi a teacher in the magic section. He eventually started to harbour feelings for Haruhi Kamisaka. Yui Sakakibara Haruhi is the main heroine in the story. She is a mage in training and is seen as very skilled amongst her peers, who have been known to think of her as a genius when it comes to using magic. She harbours feelings for Yuma Kohinata. She was mistaken by Ibuki Shikimori to be the daughter of "that" woman the woman who stole the Shikimori treasure and even tried to control her to break the barrier that seals the treasure in the Shikimori Forest. In the end, she got together with Yuma when he was transferred to the Magic Section. She tends to have a very strong-willed type of personality which she uses to try to get the things she wants. It can also make her reckless when it comes to her using magic, due to her being overconfident and underskilled compared to Haruhi. She is left handed according to the seventh anime episode. She applied for a part-time job as a waitress in the Oasis cafeteria to save some money for her to be able to go abroad and study at a Magic Institution. Yura Hinata Koyuki is a friend of Haruhi and Anri who is one year above them and is also in the magic section. It takes the form of a staff with a small green sphere on the end that floats on the staff. Unlike the other magic wands featured that can speak spiritually, sphere Tom has a face from which to voice its opinions. Koyuki inherited the craft of making "Tama-chan"s and puts a lot of effort not only into their creation but going as far as to remember the order in which she made each one despite them appearing all to be relatively similar in appearance. As this dedication to magic has shown, she seems to be very skilled in her use of magic, especially divination magic or fortune telling. Most of the time, she is very standoffish and will push people away from her either figuratively or literally, so as to be left alone. She wanted to retrieve the Shikimori treasure for a reason that she wanted to see her sister, Natsumi, who died from sealing the angel demons that came out of the treasure. She mistakenly thought that Haruhi, because of her great skills in using magic, is the daughter of the woman who stole and hid the treasure. She was initially mistaken for a ghost by Hachisuke after he met up with her one night by chance at school. They have been serving the Shikimori family for generations. They never knew their mother because she is already dead. The reason is unknown. Their, she and her brother Shinya, wanting to see and meet their mother, urged their father to steal the Shikimori treasure for it was believed to have powers that can bring back the spirit of the dead but it turned into chaos. The treasure was provoked and unleashed the angel demons contained in it. Thus, it must be sealed again. She has known Haruhi since childhood and they used to play together. She has amazing skills in cooking. He seems to be desperate for any affection from girls, as the closest chance he has at getting a girl is with his friend Jun, who, despite his feminine appearance, is in fact male. He is often very perverted as well. Despite being born male, [1] Jun has a feminine appearance and wears female attire. Jun enjoys the attention received from male students. Jun adores hanging around girls as friends. She runs the school cafeteria called Oasis. She is close friends with Suzura Minagi. This is why Suzuri entrusts her to take care of Yuma. His family has served Shikimori for every generations. He has a wooden, katana-like magic wand though the name is unknown. One of his defining traits is that he has a horrible sense of direction where he even gets lost walking to school with his sister as they manage to get separated constantly. However, if Saya is in any danger, he instantly knows where she is and runs to her in seconds. She is a teacher in the magical section. She was forced to entrust her son, Yuma, to her close friend, Otoha, because of many tragic things that had happened. She revealed the whole story to Haruhi and Anri of what had happened in the past. While these happen more often than we would like, we also realize that sometimes we make excuses for other people rather than just ourselves. What about that one person who makes a commitment and then flakes at the last minute for no good reason? But what if it keeps happening time and time again? If you find that you are always there for them but they never return the favor, then maybe something is up. Maybe you are genuinely disappointed but have to put on a strong front. If the second is true, it might be time to do a little mental check to make sure you understand what your feelings are really saying. Did the person realize my expectations of their behavior? Were my expectations not even considered, leaving me angry, sad, or disappointed in them? Have I been led down this road before? Do I have a reason to expect any more than this behavior from this person? Sometimes we get into the habit of letting people off the hook. We start making excuses for these people, trying to explain their odd behavior through lies that we end up believing. But the more we make excuses for people, the more we get hurt. We are just lying to ourselves, accepting the behavior of people who lie to us. Some people just take no matter how much you give. Sometimes it is a one way street. Sometimes we are being too understanding. Sometimes we spend too much time trying to justify their actions when we can much simpler. The truth of the matter is that those who truly care for you will go out of their way to be there while others run away. True friends will go that extra mile and not see it as a burden. The people who love you will show you. There are people in this world who will either love you or not at all. You deserve such people in your life. You deserve to be with people who find reasons to be in your life. You deserve to live a life with people who care about you always.
