Julien Bradley is an indie author of Beneath the Bedrock, the first in the Bakken trilogy. Wise Ink is a boutique publishing company created to help passionate authors, like Julien, through the hurdles of publishing. Wise Ink believes in helping writers who seek a purpose-driven, intentional, and informed approach to publishing. Set in the oilfields of North Dakota, the book is a timely romance and inter-generational inquiry into ownership, loyalty, and love. Newly widowed, Ramona Brady Strong finds herself grieving doubly when her beloved father dies. After traveling back home to Williston, North Dakota to attend the funeral, she is caught up in a rekindled old romance while having to deal with pressures unique to an oilfield boomtown. Ramona has inherited one of the richest untapped oil fields in the region. Surrounded by family and friends, Williston begins to feel more and more like home. But as a web of deeply-held secrets begin to emerge, Ramona must decide whether to take control of the family oil business, or sell it all to the highest bidder. Still curious about the author? What inspires you to write? The first, there is a gross under-representation for the largest demographic group in the country, which is women over 50. These two subjects are either misrepresented or not spoken of at all. I wanted to give voice to these two near and dear topics. The world of romance needs to know, not everyone lives in an apartment in New York, or a high rise in Seattle, and things do happen outside a big city. I wanted to be the author writing these stories. How long does it take you to write a book, on average? My debut novel, Beneath the Bedrock took me a summer to write and was about 1, pages long before the final print. Imagine the editing on that one! My second book, has taken me about a year to complete and is not quite as long. What are you working on right now? I find writing is such a cathartic process. Much like journaling, so much personal growth and self-awareness comes from my ability to express myself in writing. At first, it was very intimidating, but after awhile, I become an expert on the subject, and performed the task like it was second nature. My best tip would be to write for your own personal growth. What is the story setting you ask? You guessed it, rural Minnesota. So who wants to win something?! Enter to win using the Rafflecopter form below. Published by stevent37 on April 5, Spread the love Author Teresa Martin recounts a spiritual event in her life. I recall the hot summer day when I took my three grandchildren to the photographer to have their pictures taken. I remember how silly they were acting. They teased and flirted with the photographer, making funny faces, and doing silly poses to distract him. He joked back at them and made them laugh. Hummingbirds open our eyes to the wonder of the world and inspire us to open our hearts to loved ones and friends. Like a hummingbird, we aspire to hover and to savor each moment as it passes, embrace all that life has to offer. Papyrus Like the Hummingbird of legend, my own heart had long ago been stolen by Brittany. She was thirteen, and a beautiful, golden-haired girl. Her giggle was a delight to hear. Aaron was ten, with blond curly hair, and an awesome baseball player. He was outgoing, smart and always flirting. Misty was age nine, with long blond curls falling down to her waist. She was creative, friendly, and loved to play soccer. Our grandchildren and their father, our son, Jimmy, had moved in with Floyd and me, and they have lived in my heart and home ever since. All three loved to watch the hummingbirds in our garden flit from flower to flower. They took turns filling the feeder with the sugar syrup I made for the hummers. Their mother passed away after her long battle with breast cancer. They had only been with us a couple of weeks. Little did I know that just two weeks later, the pictures the photographer took would be put on their three heart-shaped head stones. It happened on a hot summer August evening, just a week before school was to start. The children were on their way home after attending an All-Star game with one of their friends. A car coming from the opposite direction crossed over into their lane and hit their car head on. All five people in the car died, including the driver, my three grandchildren, and their friend. When the officer came to the house to tell us what happened, I could see the tears in his eyes. The officer introduced himself and gave us the terrible news. But it was true all of them dead, including the young man who was driving in the wrong lane and hit them head on. I remembered the night that Floyd, I, and our son Jimmy, sat together in the living room, not knowing what to say, yet surrounding each other with love and strength. I knew that God would be with us during this heartrending time. Jimmy took it hard, losing his three children, and he never quite recovered from the loss. Ten months later, son Jimmy, then forty one, was driving his Jeep Cherokee, and towing a trailer. He was going camping. The trailer started to sway, and he lost control of the Jeep. The trailer flipped over. Jimmy broke his neck, and he would remain a quadriplegic for the rest of his life. Again an officer came to our house and tried to explain how the accident happened. I felt my heart stop, and I gasped, desperate to catch my breath. They loved sports, so I decorated their heart-shaped gravestones with the things the children loved a basketball, a baseball, a soccer ball, and little porcelain and plastic angels. I bought hummingbird feeders and put one in front of each grave. I even made the nectar myself by mixing water and sugar. Hummers were another thing they loved. As I knelt down to say a prayer, the damp coldness of the ground beneath the grass crept into my knees. School would be starting soon, and my grandchildren would not be there. One beautiful fall morning there was a warm breeze, and not a cloud in the sky. As I meditated, a bright, red pickup truck pulled up behind me. An elderly couple got out and walked over to me. The woman looked about seventy, and she had silver hair tied in a bun. She was wearing a brown suit. The man was dressed in a grey suit and tie. He wore a sad smile on his face as they walked towards me. I turned around to look at the cloud. It was in the shape of an angel. I looked back at the cloud, and my heart was touched with peace and love. Although it was hard to lose my precious grandchildren, I know that if I have faith and trust in Him, He will see me through. Each time I return to the cemetery, as I am refilling the hummingbird feeders, I sense that same inner peace and love. I know our Heavenly Father cares for each of us, and is with us every day, sending his angels to watch over us all and protect us always.
