Debbie Reynolds — Mary Frances Debbie Reynolds was an American actress, singer, businesswoman, film historian, and humanitarian. In 1958, she released her first pop album, titled Debbie. Reynolds was also a cabaret performer, in 1961 she founded the Debbie Reynolds Dance Studio in North Hollywood, which still operates today. She was also nominated for a Daytime Emmy Award for her performance in A Gift of Love, at the turn of the millennium, Reynolds reached a new younger generation with her role as Aggie Cromwell in Disney's Halloweentown series. In 1995 she released her autobiography titled, Debbie, My Life, in 2000, she released a second autobiography, Unsinkable, A Memoir. She served as president of The Thalians, a dedicated to mental health causes. Reynolds continued to perform successfully on stage, television, and film into her eighties, in January 1988, Reynolds received the Screen Actors Guild Life Achievement Award. She died from the stroke that afternoon, one day after the death of her daughter Carrie Fisher. She had a two years her senior. Reynolds was a Girl Scout, once saying that she wanted to die as the worlds oldest living Girl Scout and her mother took in laundry for income, while they lived in a shack on Magnolia Street in El Paso. And Im trying to inculcate in my children the same sense of values and her family moved to Burbank, California in 1949. When Reynolds was a student at Burbank High School in 1947 Warner, One of her closest high school friends said that she rarely dated during her teenage years in Burbank 2. Magician fantasy — A magician, mage, sorcerer, sorceress, warlock, witch, wizard, or wizardess is someone who uses or practices magic derived from supernatural or occult sources. Magicians are common figures in works of fantasy, such as literature and role-playing games, and enjoy a rich history in mythology, legends, fiction. In medieval chivalric romance, the wizard often appears as an old man and acts as a mentor. Other magicians, such as Saruman, from The Lord of the Rings series, villainous sorcerers were so crucial to pulp fantasy that the genre in which they appeared was dubbed sword and sorcery. Le Guins A Wizard of Earthsea explored the question of how wizards learned their art and this theme has been further developed in modern fantasy, often leading to wizards as heroes on their own quests. Such heroes may have their own mentor, a wizard as well, wizards can be cast similarly to the absent-minded professor, being foolish and prone to misconjuring. They can also be capable of magic, both good or evil. Even comical wizards are often capable of feats, such as those of Miracle Max in The Princess Bride, although he is a washed-up wizard fired by the villain. Wizards are often depicted as old, white-haired, and with white beards majestic enough to occasionally host lurking woodland creatures. This depiction predates the modern fantasy genre, being derived from the image of wizards such as Merlin. In the Dragonlance Dungeons and Dragons setting, wizards show their moral alignment by their robes, Terry Pratchett described robes as a magicians way of establishing to those they meet that they are capable of practicing magic. To introduce conflict, writers of fiction often place limits on the magical abilities of wizards to prevent them from solving problems too easily. In Larry Nivens The Magic Goes Away, once an areas mana is exhausted, a common limit used in role-playing games is that a person can only cast a specific number of spells in a day. Magic can also require various sacrifices or the use of materials, such as gemstones, blood. Even if the magician lacks scruples, obtaining the material may be difficult, a. Moonfire combines these limits in his book The Aubrey Stalking Portal. The magician expends power to fuel his spells, but does not replenish that power naturally, therefore, the extent of a wizards knowledge is limited to which spells a wizard knows and can cast. Magic may also be limited by its danger, if a powerful spell can cause harm if miscast. Other forms of magic are limited by consequences that, while not inherently dangerous, are at least undesirable 3. History — History is the study of the past as it is described in written documents. Events occurring before written record are considered prehistory and it is an umbrella term that relates to past events as well as the memory, discovery, collection, organization, presentation, and interpretation of information about these events. Scholars who write about history are called historians and their works continue to be read today, and the gap between the culture-focused Herodotus and the military-focused Thucydides remains a point of contention or approach in modern historical writing. Ancient influences have helped spawn variant interpretations of the nature of history which have evolved over the centuries, the modern study of history is wide-ranging, and includes the study of specific regions and the study of certain topical or thematic elements of historical investigation. In Middle English, the meaning of history was story in general, the restriction to the meaning the branch of knowledge that deals with past events, the formal record or study of past events, esp. With the Renaissance, older senses of the word were revived, and it was in the Greek sense that Francis Bacon used the term in the sixteenth century. For him, historia was the knowledge of objects determined by space and time, in an expression of the linguistic synthetic vs. In modern German, French, and most Germanic and Romance languages, which are synthetic and highly inflected. The adjective historical is attested from , and historic from , Historian in the sense of a researcher of history is attested from Historians write in the context of their own time, and with due regard to the current dominant ideas of how to interpret the past, in the words of Benedetto Croce, All history is contemporary history. History is facilitated by the formation of a discourse of past through the production of narrative. The modern discipline of history is dedicated to the production of this discourse. All events that are remembered and preserved in some authentic form constitute the historical record, the task of historical discourse is to identify the sources which can most usefully contribute to the production of accurate accounts of past. Therefore, the constitution of the archive is a result of circumscribing a more general archive by invalidating the usage of certain texts and documents 4. Jinn – Jinn, also romanized as djinn or anglicized as genies, are supernatural creatures in early Arabian and later Islamic mythology and theology. An individual member of the jinn is known as a jinni, djinni and they are mentioned frequently in the Quran and other Islamic texts. The jinn, humans, and angels make up the three known sapient creations of God, like human beings, the jinn can be good, evil, or neutrally benevolent and hence have free will like humans. Jains were among various creatures believe among pre-Zoroastrian peoples of Persia, Jinn is an Arabic collective noun deriving from the Semitic root JNN, whose primary meaning is to hide. It first appeared in 18th-century translations of the Thousand and One Nights from the French, numerous mentions of jinn in the Quran and testimony of both pre-Islamic and Islamic literature indicate that the belief in spirits was prominent in pre-Islamic Bedouin religion. Julius Wellhausen has observed that such spirits were thought to inhabit desolate, dingy, and dark places, One had to protect oneself from them, but they were not the objects of a true cult. In Islamic theology jinn are said to be creatures with free will, made from fire by God as humans were made of clay. Another surah mentions jinn in the last verse, the Quran also mentions that Muhammad was sent as a prophet to both humanity and the jinn, and that prophets and messengers were sent to both communities. Like humans, jinn will also be judged on the Day of Judgment, the social organization of the jinn community resembles that of humans, e. One common belief in Muslim belief lists five distinct orders of jinn – the Marid, the Ifrit, the Shaitan, the Ghul, and the Jann. A few traditions, divide jinn into three classes, those who have wings and fly in the air, those who resemble snakes and dogs, described them as creatures of different forms, some resembling vultures and snakes, others tall men in white garb. They may even appear as dragons, onagers, or any number of other animals, in addition to their animal forms, the jinn occasionally assume human form to mislead and destroy their human victims. Ibn Taymiyyah, a late medieval theologian whose writings would later become the source of Wahhabism, believed the jinn to be generally ignorant, untruthful, oppressive. Sara Paxton â€” Sara Paxton is an American actress, model and singer. Paxtons father is distantly related to the late actor Bill Paxton, during her childhood, Paxton put on shows and wanted to perform, sometimes dressing up in costume and coming to school as a particular character. She grew up in the San Fernando Valley, choosing to attend a high school instead of accepting home-schooling. Paxton graduated from El Camino Real High School in June , Paxton has said that attending college was very important to her because it is important to expand your mind. In , Paxton applied to the University of Southern Californias film studies program and she has noted that she would like to major in business administration with a minor in history and to start a production company. Paxton delayed plans to attend college, because every time she lined up a class schedule she was offered another movie and her first film role was a small role in the Jim Carrey comedy, Liar Liar. In , Paxton starred in R. Paxton received an Emmy nomination for the role in , in , Paxton spent three months working on the Florida-themed Aquamarine, in which she played a mermaid, opposite Emma Roberts and JoJo, whom she befriended while filming. Reviewers of the film compared Paxton, whose inspiration is Goldie Hawn, to actress Reese Witherspoon, saying that she has an infectious, nutty energy. Paxton hosted The Secret Life of Water, the first episode of the series Planet H2O, in May of the same year, she made an appearance on the television series Pepper Dennis, playing a teen actress. In the film, she plays Jessie, a student who falls victim to binge drinking. Paxton has described it as different from her previous roles 8. Magic in fiction â€” Magic in fiction is the endowing of characters or objects in works of fiction with powers unavailable in the real world. The use of magic frequently manifests itself in a transformation of the character, in order to carry out its function, magic often comes at a price that is equal to its value. Contemporary authors tend to treat magic as an idea, opting to world-build with a blank slate where the laws of reality do not carry as much weight.

What do you think of the comparisons being made between you and other teen actors like Hilary Duff and Raven? How do you react to people calling you a role model? I love being a role model. What responsibilities, if any, do you think you have because of being called a role model? Are you working on any other projects right now? What can fans expect from your album? I had a small part in Liar, Liar with Jim Carrey and he was so cool. He was a really nice guy. I was only eight and he would not remember me at all but he was so funny on set and he was just really nice. I would love to work with either Goldie Hawn or Reese Witherspoon. So if you had to choose between music and acting, what would you choose? I could see myself doing acting for the rest of my life. But I think the last thing I was listening to was Kelly Clarkson. I really, really like her album. So do you have a favorite singer or band? The Rolling Stones is my favorite band. What about your favorite movie? OMG, that is so tough. All those kind of movies. Do you have a favorite TV show? My favorite TV show But, I really love The O. Do you have any celebrity crushes? I really like Ryan Gosling. Yeah, The Notebook is one of my favorite movies ever! I always cry every time I watch it. So, do you have a boyfriend? He has to be funny and nice. Do you have any tips for kids wanting to get involved in the entertainment industry? I started off with acting classes , just for fun. And those can really help you meet people because a lot of agents and managers check out acting classes to see if there are any up-and-coming talents.
