Your love for me is nourishing and refreshing. Your desire for me is to help me grow. Your Word reminds me that you take joy in me. You actually delight in me. And I am learning to delight in you. He takes great delight in you; he renews you by his love; he shouts for joy over you. Meditating on my pride is painful. It is a challenge to move selfishness out of the way and look at what you are saying to me. Give me courage as I look at me. I need your strength. As I look, I see that pride has infiltrated my life. Lord, my agenda sits on the throne of my heart. As my eyes are being opened, I realize that I will never fully see the extent of damage that has occurred through the influence of pride in my life. I need your strength, and I need your mercy. You tell us that pride comes before a fall. Without becoming more aware of my pride, I will continue to stumble and fall. I want out of the darkness. Dear Lord, let me see. Let me walk in the light, so that I can be aware of truth, and avoid stumbling over the footstool of pride that my actions put in front of me. It destroys the harmony and unity of relationships with other people and with you. Two-part harmony is beautiful. I will seek to be unified with you. If I do not harmonize with you, I become that clanging cymbal in 1 Corinthians. Lord, I am beginning to see the true face of pride. Pride mars the beauty of who you created us to be. You created each of us to be a masterpiece, and we splatter your masterpiece with the ugly paint of selfishness, and it mars the beauty. There is nothing that shines so beautifully as the love of Christ radiating out of my hands, my feet, my countenance, and my words. Only as I lay down my agenda and lay down my selfish thoughts, can I receive the love that I need in order to live life abundantly. I need to respect your commands. I realize that I need to think like you. Lord, I need to pursue you, respect you, and respect your Word. Today I dedicate myself to you. Help me to demonstrate the kind of attitude of respect for your Word that is pleasing unto you.

2: Prayer Against Pride

Occasional fervors of piety, succeeded by seasons of coldness and of deadness ; high and holy vows made, and kept awhile, and broken, and renewed again ;.

Dozens of disputes arise each year across the country regarding the issue, and the following are four examples that have occurred in just recent months. The Texas Supreme Court held that the issues in the case were not moot because the district never explicitly agreed that its elimination of the policy was a permanent decision and therefore the possibility existed that the district might reinstate the ban in the future. In , Kountze School District administrators prohibited the banners believing that school-sponsored religious messages in a public setting like a high school football game violated the Establishment Clause in the First Amendment to the U. The cheerleaders argued that their banners were non-school-sponsored, student-initiated religious expression protected by both the Free Exercise Clause and the Free Speech Clause in the First Amendment. The suit will now go forward to resolve the issue whether the Bible-verse banners are legally impermissible, school-sponsored religious messages or legally permissible, purely-student-driven communications. As of the press date for this article, no suit had yet been filed. At issue in the dispute is whether the coach, a paid employee of a public school, was engaging in a legally impermissible religious activity by impliedly promoting religion to or coercing participation in a religious activity by the players or whether he was engaging in a legally permissible private religious activity independent of his role as a government employee. They will soar on wings like eagles; they will run and not grow weary, they will walk and not be faint. The passions inflamed among the parties in all four of these cases, and in the dozens of similar situations that arise each year across the country, reflect the tension between two conflicting viewpoints regarding the constitutionality of prayer and religious activities in schools. Doe, the United States Supreme Court established a rule of law that strikes a balance between the two conflicting viewpoints regarding the constitutionality of prayer and religious activities in schools. Specifically, the Court addressed the question whether a school district policy permitting student-led prayer over the public-address system at a public high school football game violates the Establishment Clause or whether the practice must be permitted under the Free Speech Clause and Free Exercise Clause. Indeed, the common purpose of the Religion Clauses is to secure religious liberty. Thus nothing in the Constitution as interpreted by this Court prohibits any public school student from voluntarily praying at any time before, during or after the school day. Only prayer or religious activity initiated by governmental entities public schools or governmental agents those acting at the direction of schools such as school officials, teachers and coaches is prohibited. Recommendations Based on the precedent set forth by the U. Supreme Court in the Santa Fe ISD case, student-athletes acting on their own, without any involvement of the school or its personnel, may engage in prayer or religious activity. Members of a team may, therefore, spontaneously decide to take a knee in the locker room for a pre-game prayer or gather on the field for a post-game prayer or engage in other religious activity solely as individuals acting privately. Schools need only focus on ensuring that coaches and other school personnel “ who even as much as institutions might desire to have them involved in the spiritual development of students ” remain detached from student religious activities to preserve the constitutionality of those student practices, keeping in mind the intent of the founding fathers to use the Establishment Clause to protect those of faith by ensuring that they are not expressly or impliedly coerced by the government or government officials into listening to religious messages that conflict with their personal beliefs. With regard to the handling by educational institutions of the many permutations of issues regarding religious practices in schools, the U. Department of Education in issued a policy directive titled Guidance on Constitutionally Protected Prayer in Public Elementary and Secondary Schools, which sets forth a detailed summary of constitutional principles governing topics such as accommodation of prayer during instructional time; prayer during non-instructional time; organized student prayer groups and activities; prayer by teachers, administrators and other school

He was an Anglican Priest who became a Roman Priest. He was a homilist, writer, author and hymnist. I think in that word had a different connotation than it does today. I would replace the word with extremes. Faber begins by writing about the ancient Jews, that they prayed seven times a day. Faber then lists reasons as to why people do not pray as much as in times past. One of the successes of the Oxford Movement was pointed out and ultimately, it was changed. Faber writes, "The early Christians received this great Sacrament once every Sunday at least It was their daily nourishment. How strong must they have been who went forth to battle sustained by the Body of their Lord and Saviour, the everlasting Son of God; with what cheerfulness and alacrity did they brace themselves up to meet danger, whose hearts were gladdened continually with the spiritual wine of His most precious Blood! In ancient times men had it continually in their thoughts. They could scarcely speak or write on any religious subject without the discourse turning on Baptism They called it "the new birth". Faber says that St Peter wrote that by Baptism we are saved. From the Prayer Book is this Prayer, which I will now use, "Almighty and everlasting God, heavenly Father, we give Thee humble thanks that Thou hast vouchsafed to call us to the knowledge of Thy grace and faith in Thee: Increase this knowledge of Thy graces and confirm this faith in us evermore. Most of what he writes, is pertinent to England and that time period. Here then is our remedy, here our safeguard against religious excitement, in the Prayer-Book. Faber says that by using the Prayer Book, that we are uniting ourselves with many other Christians throughout the world. The humblest member of the Church need not, cannot feel solitary in his religious course" And Father Faber ends with one of his poems, The daily round, the common task, will give us all we ought to ask, room to deny ourselves, a road to bring us daily nearer God. Those of us who read the Book of Divine Worship are praying a text that is the oldest book prayed by English persons. Father Brown also wrote the petition to Rome which approved the Anglican Use in It comes from an article by Wilfrid Woolen, Faber and some other Fathers were giving a mission at their schools in the slums of Holborn. The majority of the Catholics of the neighborhood were Catholics only in name.

A girl of about nine walked past, holding a package of juice boxes with a picture of a castle and an owl on it. Harry Potter fans abound. Over million books have sold worldwide. The movie will be out November Harry Potter merchandise, tie-ins, and spin-offs are everywhere. Some Christians shudder at this, but try looking at it another way. Just as the Apostle Paul used the pagan poetry to preach Christ to the people of Athens, there are ways we can use the Harry Potter story to share the love of Jesus Christ in a relevant way. Would you be willing to overcome any discomfort you have over Harry Potter to introduce kids who love Harry to the love of Jesus Christ? Most Christians can recite John 3: Let me share how our family plans to use Halloween and Harry Potter to share the gospel, and how you can too. We want it to be the best thing in the bag, so they will read it with an open heart. Up front stands a boy with his trick-or-treat bag held open with eager little hands. How would you treat that child? Could you extend the love of God in a way that would make a positive impact, but also warn against the dangers of real-world witchcraft? I know many Christians struggle with the dangers and debate surrounding Harry Potter. Those are important issues, Christians need to work through in godly ways. However, even Christians who personally oppose Harry Potter can choose not to condemn the multitudes who love the Harry Potter stories; but use that interest as a connecting point. When we do, we can bring the light and love of Jesus into their lives -- even on a night that could be filled with darkness. So, You Like Harry Potter? About as bad as you could go. Harry became famous as The Boy Who Lived when he survived that curse. Voldemort hit Harry with the curse again. But the curse was broken. Lily Potter loved her son so much that she gave her life. She jumped in front of the curse to save him. As Dumbledore said, "to have been loved so deeply", gave Harry protection forever. What a great story! Before the world began, an angel went God cast him out of heaven, like lightning, see? People lived in fear of death until the curse was broken. Jesus broke the curse. He took it on himself when he died on the cross. When Jesus came back alive that proved the curse was broken. He is the real elixir of life. Jesus came to destroy the works of the devil that angel who when bad. He prayed we would "be protected from the evil one. Practice Defense Against the Dark Arts.
