Looking for an inspiring and healthy life style I would like to know if one like myself could sell art or be a sidewalk portrait artist. Are there clubs that have live music? Note that there is a "union" for musicians and performing in these venues requires a "permit" and the payment of fees and a percentage of your income. I believe that if you want to sell anything on the sidewalk or Malecon, that you also need a permit and they are very hard to come by. It is all strictly regulated This letter was sent to us a very long time ago pre-email! Although the details on the books is dated, the books can still be found and will still be of value to anyone interested in the flowers and trees of Mexico. If you have any other recommendations, please email us. We have been looking for books on Mexican Flora. The Flora is so beautiful and interesting, but there does not seem to be much available to help in identifying them. Each glimpse is proof that Mex-trippers continue the tradition I grew up in: Mayo The story has plenty to lure the reader: Maximilian, an idealistic Austrian prince who, with French backing, is crowned emperor of Mexico in I grow querulous and irritable, I get that old familiar morning-after feeling of being ungrounded Carol was my godmother, and she and my mother knew each other from the old days in San Miguel de Allende. It is not intended to be an exact definition, but should help you to understand the concept. These are just my personal ideas and are not meant to be "rigorous". Its All About "Time to Solve" When you measure how long a program takes to run when it is given more and more difficult problems such as sorting a list of 10 items, 20 items, 30 items etc you can plot the times and come up with a function. That program is in "P", as it is solvable in "Polynomial" time. In this case the polynomial is: The "N" actually stands for "Non-deterministic". This means that you are dealing with an amazing kind of computer that can run things simultaneously or could somehow guess the right way to do things, or something like that. So this "N" computer can solve lots more problems in "P" time - for example it can just clone copies of itself when needed. It is not a Super Computer they are just very fast normal computers , it is really a "Non-deterministic" computer, but I am calling it an Amazing Computer to give you the idea! So, programs that take dramatically longer as the problem gets harder i. Thus "NP" means "we can solve it in polynomial time if we can break the normal rules of step-by-step computing". Amazing Computers can also do what normal Computers can Since this amazing "N" computer can also do anything a normal computer can, we know that "P" problems are also in "NP". Imagine you need to visit 5 cities on your sales tour. You know all the distances. Which is the shortest round-trip to follow? An obvious solution is to check all possibilities. But this only works for small problems. If you add a new city it needs to be tried out in every previous combination. So this method takes " factorial time": Imagine the program solves a city problem in 1 second, then a city problem will take about 21 seconds to solve. And a city problem will take about seconds over 7 minutes , and a city problem will take 3 Million Years. Luckily, there are special ways to break the problem into sub-problems called "dynamic programming", but the best still take exponential time: But if we had the "Amazing Computer" mentioned above it could, for example, create copies of itself to check all the possibilities, and hopefully solve the problem very quickly. Anyway, I hope this "quick and dirty" introduction has helped you

The most beautiful places in India. India is a place that defies description. At over million sq km it's one of the biggest countries in the world, one with a wildly varied landscape.

Workshop Many first-time visitors to this site are probably overwhelmed by the vast number of pages, templates, packages, sizes and loose forms available. The goal here is to teach you how to create an effective industrial-strength planner system that can last for years, yet costs next to nothing. For example, I can now create a dozen double-sided punched forms in about three to four minutes, including printing, by using basic i. No special skills are involved, just a little patience and an hour or two to follow the step-by-step instructions the first time through. Classic size, which is 5. A planner this size offers a great balance of writing space, portability, and amount of material to carry. A5 size, which is half an A4 sheet, and found in most other countries world-wide outside of North America. These planners are a little bit wider and not quite as tall as classic, but otherwise are very similar. Filofax is a popular brand with a wide range of options. Letter size, which is standard North American full-size sheets 8. Great if you need a lot of space, but poor for portability; it can get large and heavy. Planners and binders this size can be found quite cheaply indeed. A4 size, the rough equivalent of letter size in most countries outside of North America, and subject to many of the same pros and cons of letter size above. Hipster PDA size, which is 3"x5" index card size people outside North America often scale to slightly different sizes. Many people keep a stack of index cards with to-do lists, calendars, notes and other important info. Small and portable, and all you really need is a binder clip to keep it together. Other Basic Supplies At a minimum, you might need the following: A planner, as mentioned above, unless you want a Hipster PDA. Paper of the right type. That means the correct size and stock. Both are available cheap at most department or office supply stores. For example, I find it hard to find classic size paper in my area, so I get letter-size paper and cut it in half with Only needed if you need to chop paper yourself. The key is getting the right one for your paper. If you have a six- or seven-hole planner, you may have to buy an expensive specialty hole-punch: Some people use expensive fountain pens and other extravagant writing utensils. I use a Pilot G2 0. I can still lust after Fisher Space Pens , though. Access to a computer and printer. Does all this sound expensive? Well, put things in perspective. That will get you a planner system that will last for years, a very handy guillotine and hole punch, and an endless supply of planning, time management, and other handy forms for the minute cost of some paper and ink. Sounds like a good deal to me, especially when compared to the very expensive and limited store-bought forms, or even digital PDAs. Doubly so, if you can use a few things at the office to save yourself some money. You should have at least version 6. Classic or A5, 1-up or 2-up. If you already have paper the right size which I recommend, even if it means chopping it yourself , choose the 1-up: If, for some reason, your printer does not allow printing on the correct size form or it insists on center-aligning the page, you can choose the 2-up. That prints two forms on one letter-size or A4 page. If you want the Hipster PDA index card version, visit this page: The graphic version is for those people wanting to do their own layouts: The safest bet is to get the 4-up. This prints four forms per page on regular full-size stock which tends to be pretty cheap , and then you just chop with a guillotine or cut with scissors. Save the file to your hard drive, double-click on the file, and it should create a directory with the files. The ones you need are the PDF files. Open them and browse through the forms. Find one that will prove useful for you, something basic for now such as the Checklist. The top of your guillotine should have a guide across the top. This serves two important purposes: That means your page will be cut exactly in half. For example, my guillotine has a groove at 5. Both halves of the paper should be the exact same size if done right. This means that there will always be a nice margin for your binder rings. Odd pages numbers in the PDF 3,5, This is how to get started for non-Hipsters in 1-up: Choose the front of the form. In the dialog box, tell it not to scale, rotate or center. This is very important! Tell it to print only one copy, and just the current page. Ensure that the right size paper is loaded into your printer, and that the paper guides are holding it snug to the edge. Cover your eyes and hit the Print button. Check your printed form. It should fit nicely on the page, with a margin at left for the punched holes. Printing How-To for more advice and trouble-shooting. In the PDF, choose the back of the form the even page number, margin on right and print as above. You may have to experiment a little until you get the knack for printing the forms in the correct orientation hint: Print off one at a time, and try not to waste paper or ink. If not, it may mix colours to produce black. This is often a waste of money, so turn off colour printing if possible. Many will, and quite cheaply. If you have index cards and want to print singles, put a few in the printer and align the guides. Using the 1-up PDF file, send one form to the printer, telling it not to scale, rotate or center. Put regular card stock recommended: You can print on both sides before cutting if you choose, although you may wish to turn on centering. Just stick in your paper the side with the wider margins and punch. These punches usually come with a little nut or handle to loosen, and each punch should then slide freely left and right. Use a sample punched form such as one that probably came in your planner to align each punch and then tighten it into place again. Slide your pre-punched form into place within the puncher, and press down on the handle. Where the top and bottom edges of the paper are located on the guide, use a china marker or some liquid paper to put little marks. Simply insert your unpunched forms keep it to five sheets or less for light-duty models, align them between the marks, and then punch. A Hipster PDA is usually not punched, although some people like to create holes for insertion into tiny planners, or to hold the cards together with a ring or carabiner. Making Tabbed Section Dividers Unless you can find tabbed dividers in your office supply store most larger ones carry them for a few dollars, you will probably want to make your own. Cut a letter-size or A4 sheet of card stock suggested weight: Each half will be a divider. Create at least five. Line up the other tabs on the same sheet, and space according to your tastes. Make some pencil marks to denote where each tab will be placed. This is your tab guide. Align your guide against each divider and use it to figure out where to stick the tab down the side. Peel off the adhesive and stick. As an added bonus, you can add tabs to the top of pages as well. Some people do this for high-priority sections. Setting Up Your Planner for more advice. Some very basic tips, however: Cover, with profile information au verso Pouches, business card pages, etc. Also, make sure you have the forms you need, but no more. A good rule of thumb: In its most basic form, the Hipster PDA is simply a stack of cards with a binder clip. Many people decide that this is a little too free-form for them, though, and have developed a number of ingenious templates, cases, and ways to use them.

So why is the word "teenager" causing you so much worry? So, although it can be a period of conflict between parent and child, the teen years are also a time to help kids grow into the distinct individuals they will become. Understanding the Teen Years So when does adolescence start? Most of us think of puberty as the development of adult sexual characteristics: These are the changes of adolescence. Many kids announce the onset of adolescence with a dramatic change in behavior around their parents. At the same time, kids this age are increasingly aware of how others, especially their peers, see them and are desperately trying to fit in. Kids often start "trying on" different looks and identities, and they become very aware of how they differ from their peers, which can result in episodes of distress and conflict with parents. Butting Heads One of the common stereotypes of adolescence is the rebellious, wild teen continually at odds with mom and dad. Although it may be the case for some kids and this is a time of emotional ups and downs, that stereotype certainly is not representative of most teens. But the primary goal of the teen years is to achieve independence. As teens mature, they start to think more abstractly and rationally. And parents of teens may find that kids who previously had been willing to conform to please them will suddenly begin asserting themselves " and their opinions " strongly and rebelling against parental control. You may need to look closely at how much room you give your teen to be an individual and ask yourself questions such as: Here are some tips: Educate Yourself Read books about teenagers. Think back on your own teen years. Remember your struggles with acne or your embarrassment at developing early " or late. Expect some mood changes in your typically sunny child, and be prepared for more conflict as he or she matures as an individual. And the more you know, the better you can prepare. You know your kids. This is a good time to jump in with your own questions such as: Are you noticing any changes in your body? Are you having any strange feelings? A yearly physical exam is a great time to talk about this. A doctor can tell your preadolescent " and you " what to expect in the next few years. The later you wait to have these talks, the more likely your child will be to form misconceptions or become embarrassed about or afraid of physical and emotional changes. And the earlier you open the lines of communication, the better your chances of keeping them open through the teen years. Give your child books on puberty written for kids going through it. Share memories of your own adolescence. Pick Your Battles If teenagers want to dye their hair, paint their fingernails black, or wear funky clothes, think twice before you object. Ask why your teen wants to dress or look a certain way and try to understand how your teen is feeling. You also might want to discuss how others might perceive them if they look different " help your teen understand how he or she might be viewed. Still, they usually understand and need to know that their parents care enough about them to expect certain things such as good grades, acceptable behavior, and sticking to the house rules. If parents have appropriate expectations, teens will likely try to meet them. Inform Your Teen " and Stay Informed Yourself The teen years often are a time of experimentation, and sometimes that experimentation includes risky behaviors. Regular communication between parents can go a long way toward creating a safe environment for all teens in a peer group. Know the Warning Signs A certain amount of change is normal during the teen years. But too drastic or long-lasting a switch in personality or behavior may signal real trouble " the kind that needs professional help. Watch for these warning signs:
