Matt Groening, the creator and executive producer of the Emmy Award-winning series The Simpsons, as well as creator of the cartoon strip "Life in Hell" and the animated FOX television series Futurama, is the man responsible for bringing animation back to primetime and creating an immortal nuclear family.

It has been published around September–October, for Halloween, every year since. Like the episodes, the comic book always feature three stories in each issue. The stories are written and illustrated by some of the most famous people in the comic book business. The stories usually parody modern horror stories and films, and feature distorted versions of the people of Springfield. Eighteen titles were published from to . Discontinued series, limited series and one-shots[edit] Simpsons Comics and Stories[edit] Cover of the only issue of Simpsons Comics and Stories. Simpsons Comics and Stories was a one-shot comic book edition of the magazine Simpsons Illustrated. Due to the success of this comic book, the Bongo Comics group was created. The first issue was published on November 29, . This mainly reprints the stories from the U. But returned some time later. On March 20, , Bongo Comics released the "th issue" of the "Simpsons Comic," with the issue having an extra special supersized story. Since the release of the first Simpsons Comics issue in the United States in , the comic book series has been published at some point in the following countries around the world: The comic book series is centered on the Simpsons star Bart Simpson, but it also features the children of Springfield and each issue commonly has several short stories. The single issue was only ten pages long. The Bartman comic was put on hold and there was a gap of 9 months between Bartman 3 and 4. The comics tried to expand on two characters that really did not need any expanding, and the readers thought Itchy and Scratchy was best in short, violent bursts and that full-length stories only took away from the visceral shock of the cartoon, so the comic book series was canceled in . One version came with a poster that could be combined with posters contained in Radioactive Man 1, Simpsons Comics 1 and Bartman 1 to make a giant poster. Each COA was individually numbered and had a raised seal stamped onto it. Smaller Radioactive Man stories have also been published in Simpsons Comics. A running gag is that in order to preserve his secret identity, Claude is constantly wearing various types of hats, in order to conceal the lightning bolt-shaped shrapnel sticking out of his head. Claude would attempt to remove the bolt throughout the book series, but each attempt has nasty consequences which results in it being put back in his scalp again. The comic also takes the idea that the title has been running since the s and each issue of the real series is a random issue from that run. So one issue might be issue , the next and the next etc. The comic was featured in the Hero Illustrated magazine, and it contained a mini poster of Bartman and Radioactive Man. The story was written by Steve Vance. The postman turns out to be Ned Flanders and while he gives her a tour through the wondrous world they get caught by Mr. Burns forces Lisa to battle him in a game of Scrabble; she accepts and after a while she gets upset and smashes the board. It was printed in December, , and was only available in Australia and New Zealand. Released as its own series independent of Simpsons Comics and Futurama Comics, part one was released on August 21, , followed by part two on January 28, . The five issues were released between July and November . It consists of five stories from Simpsons Comics Super Spectacular. It combines two titles from the Simpsons One-Shot Wonders line: It was first released in in the United States. Simpsons Super Spectacular has ended on 17 October . It has been released on a quarterly schedule every year since , and each issue reprint two issues of the initial Simpsons Comics series.
