*The Apprentice Soldier [Frank J. Vargo, John E. Vargo] on www.enganchecubano.com FREE shipping on qualifying offers. The Apprentice Soldier is the true story of a young man's adventure as a soldier in World War II.*

I am an American Soldier. I am a warrior and a member of a team. I serve the people of the United States, and live the Army Values. I will always place the mission first. I will never accept defeat. I will never quit. I will never leave a fallen comrade. I am disciplined, physically and mentally tough, trained and proficient in my warrior tasks and drills. I always maintain my arms, my equipment and myself. I am an expert and I am a professional. I stand ready to deploy, engage, and destroy, the enemies of the United States of America in close combat. I am a guardian of freedom and the American way of life. Cadet Creed I am an army cadet. Soon I will take an oath and become an army officer committed to defending the values which make this nation great. Honor is my touchstone. I understand mission first and people always. I am the past-the spirit of those warriors who have made the final sacrifice. I am the present-the scholar and apprentice soldier enhancing my skills in the science of warfare and the art of leadership. But above all, I am the future-the future warrior leader of the United States Army. May God give me the compassion and judgment to lead and the gallantry in battle to win. I will do my duty. Army Values Loyalty Bear true faith and allegiance to the U. Constitution, the Army, your unit and other Soldiers. Bearing true faith and allegiance is a matter of believing in and devoting yourself to something or someone. A loyal Soldier is one who supports the leadership and stands up for fellow Soldiers. By wearing the uniform of the U. Army you are expressing your loyalty. And by doing your share, you show your loyalty to your unit. Duty Fulfill your obligations. Doing your duty means more than carrying out your assigned tasks. Duty means being able to accomplish tasks as part of a team. The work of the U. Army is a complex combination of missions, tasks and responsibilities - all in constant motion. Our work entails building one assignment onto another. You fulfill your obligations as a part of your unit every time you resist the temptation to take "shortcuts" that might undermine the integrity of the final product. Respect Treat people as they should be treated. Respect is trusting that all people have done their jobs and fulfilled their duty. And self-respect is a vital ingredient with the Army value of respect, which results from knowing you have put forth your best effort. The Army is one team and each of us has something to contribute. Selfless Service Put the welfare of the nation, the Army and your subordinates before your own. Selfless service is larger than just one person. In serving your country, you are doing your duty loyally without thought of recognition or gain. The basic building block of selfless service is the commitment of each team member to go a little further, endure a little longer, and look a little closer to see how he or she can add to the effort. Honor Live up to Army values. This award goes to Soldiers who make honor a matter of daily living - Soldiers who develop the habit of being honorable, and solidify that habit with every value choice they make. Honor is a matter of carrying out, acting, and living the values of respect, duty, loyalty, selfless service, integrity and personal courage in everything you do. Integrity is a quality you develop by adhering to moral principles. It requires that you do and say nothing that deceives others. As your integrity grows, so does the trust others place in you. The more choices you make based on integrity, the more this highly prized value will affect your relationships with family and friends, and, finally, the fundamental acceptance of yourself. Personal Courage Face fear, danger or adversity physical or moral. Personal courage has long been associated with our Army. With physical courage, it is a matter of enduring physical duress and at times risking personal safety. Facing moral fear or adversity may be a long, slow process of continuing forward on the right path, especially if taking those actions is not popular with others. You can build your personal courage by daily standing up for and acting upon the things that you know are honorable.

Game by sack using the platformer game maker: You have landed on the wrong planet, and a Wizard wants you to get your ship back but the owners of the land dont.

One that surpasses even Sephiroth. When he returns to Konoha will he regain his humanity or fall like his Sensei? I am dedicating this story to a good friend of mine VFSnake who is a badass in making killer Naruto fics. He also gave me permission to start it off using his first chapter but mine will be different. The Apprentice and Rookies The Kyuubi no Kitsune was a nine tailed demon fox, who had the power to level mountains with and split the seas with a single swipe of its tail. It crush trees just as easily as one could breathe, and is the very embodiment of power incarnate, an unstoppable force with no equal and feared nothing or no one and right now the Village Hidden in the Leaf was standing in its way as was the Shinobi and the Yondaime Hokage who was on top of the toad boss Gamabunta with a child in his arms. Prepare to die puny human! Forgive me "Naruto," said Minato Namikaze, the Yellow Flash who now had tears in his eyes and then kissed his son right on the forehead, and began making seals to prepare the boy for a life of pain and despair. The Yondaime was so caught up in this act of selflessness in sacrificing his own son, he failed to notice a man hiding in wait with interest in what was going to happen, and had some idea of what was about to happen. Still, the place he had landed was quite interesting unto itself, as the thriving life around him that was nature seemed to be in amass abundance here unlike in Midgar back home, and while this had no form of influence on him However, there is time to watch, and observe this little marvel of a moment. Walking towards the crying child, Zeon knelt down, and examined the boy to find faint whisker-like birthmarks of all things on his face and suspected this was a side effect of such a sealing, which meant that the instant people came here, they would know what happened to the fox and that it is still alive in the boy. Even now Zeon could see this child possesses unlimited potential that was surging inside of him and even then it was apparent and now with the fox sealed inside of him, the child had a Godlike potential that would be stunted out of the fears of the village fearing a second coming of the fox that would be a self fulfilling prophesy if they had there way of doing things. With a quick sleeping spell, the boy was silenced if only for a time, and Zeon needed to find out how to get home while at the same time needing to stay away from these Wutai carbon copies in the area coming this way. Vanishing quickly into the shadows, Zeon watched from a safe undetectable distance, as an aging man in white robes was now walking upon the battlefield of death, and had a look of sadness at the fall of his successor. Zeon found himself smiling at the way this now empowered boy seemed to smile when he said that and knew that Naruto was going to be one of the greatest among the SOLDIER members. He wears a long black coat with silver pauldrons, black boots, and black clothing underneath. The top of his clothing underneath his uniform is split to reveal his chest, covered by crossing leather straps. His hair is long and silver, with his bangs parted to either side of his face and had green cat like eyes. The other man was a tall man with broad muscles. They were Sephiroth and Angeal Hewley. He is wearing a pair of small round glasses and a white lab coat, white shirt with a blue tie, grey pants with a brown belt, and grey shoes. As he walked out of the elevator, he had a distinctive hunch. As they made it to the lab where Hojo makes his experiments Angeal decided to speak up. Hojo, as he pressed a button that opened the door to what he believed resided his greatest experiment to date, and his most profound project given to him by the late Commander. Hojo and for your sake, it better be or my blade will taste your blood. This is your greatest achievement? You really must want me to kill you. This is not just any ordinary boy Commander Sephiroth. This boy was brought here by your predecessor after he witnessed the child being used by his father to seal away a powerful spirit that almost brought an entire village to its knees! The boy had been absorbing information at an astonishing rate, his power as of now is so incredible that even without the beast sealed inside him in less than a few years to come he will become the ultimate lifeform! One with no equal and will become even stronger than you two and Genesis" said Dr. Said Commander remained silent for a moment but then decided to speak up. Hojo nod, and look down in shame at not being able to stamp out the preverbal weakness out of the boy. Since the specimen is supposed to be an agent of war and a warrior with no equal, I thought the only one to teach him how to interact properly with those around him would be you and Angeal, and to further develop his skills for battle. Hojo explained as he saw Sephiroth look at him, and then at the boy floating in liquid. I have done little to nothing that would hinder the growth of my most prized specimen. I even gave the boy a few more injections that involved two certain genes and much to my surprise, his body willingly accepted them both without any form of backlash whatsoever. Hojo, as he motioned for Sephiroth and Angeal to follow him to a recording of the battle simulation recordings that had been saved show proof in the potential this child held. These result are most impressive. When you are done with him being here, call for me again, and I will take him out of here to begin his necessary training. Soon the name Naruto Uzumaki would be respected and feared just like Sephiroth is and said man knew that the boy was destined for greatness. He was also highly proficient in hand to hand combat and using trench knives which made his fighting skills even more dangerous and even became very proficient in using the different spell varieties and like his sensei was and using magic without the use of materia and even has a full set of mastered materia. Sephiroth and Angeal made sure that Naruto mastered everything they taught him before having him go on missions with them. Despite being praised by his sensei Naruto still had a way to go before he would surpass man since he could slice through an entire building with one swing of his blade and the structure would fall to pieces. Killing was another thing that the boy thrived in since Naruto had no problems with it due to Dr. One was a well dressed man with slick and smooth blonde hair and was wearing glasses while another one was also blonde but he had wild spiky shoulder length hair with jaw length bangs that had silver highlights and had deep electric blue eyes with tints of green around the pupils. He wore a black hooded coat with silver lining that stopped above his knees with silver white shoulder guards and a black sleeveless muscle shirt with a pair of black loose fitting pants with two silver belts that were in an x-formation around his waist with black SOLDIER issued boots and wore a pair of black fingerless gloves. He has the potential. Lazard on the other hand interlocked his hands together and hums. So any word on our missing quarry Genesis? Our Intel has yet to find his location. Right now our main priority is dealing with the rest of Wutai and ending this war once and for all. That was when the slide door to the briefing room opened, and entering the room was none other than Angeal and Zack. Angeal has spoken highly of you. Zack on the other hand grinned and rubbed his nose with his index finger. Zack saw the blonde and raised an eyebrow. Zack remained stumped and the next thing Angeal knew he was in a one arm hug courtesy to Zack. Knock it off already! Naruto shook his head at how he reacted. He just needs a push into the right path. You need more than just skill to become a higher. You need to learn when to use this. Just what are you trying to say? Anyways what do you know of Dumbapples? Never heard of them. Even I have heard of Dumbapples. Know-it-all tell me what are these dumbapples? The Banora White trees bear fruit at random times of the year, which is the reason the villagers call them dumbapples and they can be made into juice which is extremely tasty. And why is that? What did he mean by that Angeal? Darn it Angeal tell me what he meant by that! Outskirts of Fort Tamblin "You know what to do Naruto. With Naruto The 14 year old SOLDIER 1st Class was zipping through the forest like a blur, avoiding any patrol unit that were in the area but when one unit had cut off his route to the base, he took them out without any trouble. As he got closer to the fortress he noticed that there were some Wutai patrolling the rooftops. An eerie smile forms on his face and holds his hand out. A flaming white energy ball forms in his hands and holds it out in front of the Fortress. The 1st class Soldier pulls the Buster Blade out, holds it sideways in front of his face, and does a silent prayer. After that he opens his eyes once again and places it on his back. That was when an explosion occurred and the two look to see a third of the fortress brought up in flames. Wutai were running around frantically and trying to find a way to put the fires out. Naruto watched the display and levitated off the top of the tree and slowly descended towards the ground. One Wutai spotted the blonde who was calmly walking towards them with Muramasa drawn. Naruto continued to walk until he took off in a burst of speed that the first Wuta had little time to defend himself and was cut down by a flash of silver and collapsed to the ground dead. One wutai growled and switched his weapon to gun mode as did the rest who aimed theirs at Naruto. Said blonde smiled and dismissed Murmasa and reached behind his coat and pulled out two identical pairs of Full Tang Fighting knives and placed them in a reversed position and afterwards he started to slowly hover over the ground a little. When he heard their weapons click, he took this opportunity to ascend towards the first Wutia soldier and struck him down with a diagonal slash across the chest, spraying blood everywhere, and the kicks him away. Another makes attempt to strike the blonde with his Halberd only to have it cut in half and having his throat sliced opened. After it was over, Naruto stood around the bodies of the dead Wutai with blood dripping from the Knives and in a quick motion, wiped the blood of the knives and sheathes them. That was when his phone range and he pulls it out of his trench coat and flips it open. What do I look like a babysitter? Naruto flipped into the air and landed softly onto the ground and caught his phone. Also suggestions for the next chapter are welcomed so until then peace out! Your review has been posted.

Eucrates and Pancrates, the Egyptian Miracle Worker Lucian "I will tell you," [said Eucrates,] "another incident derived from my own experience, not from hearsay. Perhaps even you, Tychiades, when you have heard it, may be convinced of the truth of the story. Well, what I heard from it was not a meaningless voice, as in the general experience of common people; Memnon himself actually opened his mouth and delivered me an oracle in seven verses, and if it were not too much of a digression, I would have repeated the very verses for you. But on the voyage up, there chanced to be sailing with us a man from Memphis, one of the scribes of the temple, wonderfully learned, familiar with all the culture of the Egyptians. He was said to have lived underground for twenty-three years in their sanctuaries, learning magic from Isis. At last he persuaded me to leave all my servants behind in Memphis and to go with him quite alone, for we should not lack people to wait upon us; and thereafter we got on in that way. But whenever we came to a stopping place, the man would take either the bar of the door or the broom or even the pestle, put clothes upon it, say a certain spell over it, and make it walk, appearing to everyone else to be a man. It would go off and draw water and buy provisions and prepare meals and in every way deftly serve and wait upon us. Then, when he was through with its services, he would again make the broom a broom or the pestle a pestle by saying another spell over it. Though I was very keen to learn this from him, I could not do so, for he was jealous, although most ready to oblige in everything else. But one day I secretly overheard the spell -- it was just three syllables -- by taking my stand in a dark place. He went off to the square after telling the pestle what it had to do, and on the next day, while he was transacting some business in the square, I took the pestle, dressed it up in the same way, said the syllables over it, and told it to carry water. When it had filled and brought in the jar, I said, "Stop! Be a pestle again! Meanwhile Pancrates appeared on the scene, and comprehending what had happened, turned them into wood again, just as they were before the spell, and then for his own part left me to my own devices without warning, taking himself off out of sight somewhere. You ought to be easy with them and not accustom them to hear things like this which will abide with them and annoy them their lives long and will make them afraid of every sound by filling them with all sorts of superstition. Harmon, translator, Lucian , vol. William Heinemann; New York: English and Greek on opposite pages. This episode untitled in the original is taken from the dialogue The Lover of Lies. Lucian of Samasota ca. His purpose in The Lover of Lies was to belittle belief in supernatural tales of the type presented here. Magic Book Germany A pastor at Krailsheim had old large books secured with chains to the walls and ceilings of a vaulted room. One time a servant girl was alone in this room, and out of curiosity she opened one of the books and read aloud a passage from it. Suddenly the entire room was crawling with mice, causing the servant girl to cry for help. At her cry the pastor the pastor came to her, and she hurriedly told him what had happened. He then read the passage from end to beginning, upon which the mice all disappeared. The Book of Magic Russia A soldier was quartered in a certain town. He had taken to study the black art, and had got possession of books which dealt therewith. One day, during his absence from his quarters, one of his comrades came to see him. It was in the evening, and he read by the light of a lamp. The book was full of names and nothing else. He had read about half of the names when he raised his head, and looking around him, saw that the room was full of diabolical looking beings. The soldier was struck with terror, and not knowing what to do, began again to read the book. After reading for some little time, he again looked round him; the number of spirits had increased. Again he read, and having finished the book, looked again around him. By this time the number of demons had so much increased that there was barely space for them in the room. The soldier saw that the situation was serious; he shut the book, closed his eyes, and anxiously awaited his comrade. The spirits pressed closer and closer upon him, crying, "Give us work to do -- quick! In two minutes they returned and said, "It is done! Give us some more work to do -- quick! Thus, before the soldier could think of some new labor to be done, the old one was completed, and the demons were again at his side demanding more work. When he began to think what he should give them, they pressed round him, and threatened him with instant death if he did not give them something to do. What course should he take? How deliver himself from the evil spirits? The soldier thought to himself, "While I was reading the book, not one of the demons came near me. Let me try to read it again; perhaps that will keep them off. When the soldier hesitated at a word, or paused to rest himself, the goblins became more restless and violent, demanding, "Give us work to do! Suddenly a thought occurred to him, "The spirits appeared when I read the book from the beginning; let me now read it from the end, perhaps this will send them way. After reading for some time he observed that the number of spirits decreased; the lamp began again to burn brightly, and there was an empty space around him. The soldier was delighted, and continued his reading. He read and read until he had read them all away. And thus he saved himself from the demons. His comrade came in soon afterwards. The soldier told him what had happened. Had you not thus read them away by midnight they would have devoured you.

What did that even mean? At the end of the hallway, she could see a big glass ball similar to the ones the other Reapers used, but this one was bigger, and the pedestal that held it seemed to be made of pure gold, and the crystal sparkled. As they walked up to it, it opened for them like a swirling clam on a mermaid movie Lily saw once. And if you are going to take my place, you must become well acquainted with all of them. Basically another world or place. So will the glass ball thing get us to these places? She closed her eyes and held her breath as the darkness completely encompassed them. You can open your eyes. The clean blank white walls and old hanging lightbulbs had been replaced with brown stony walls and torches. The two of them walked down the warm glow of the hallway towards a large old fashioned wood door with intricate engravings on it. Standing on either side, were two large men with staffs standing guard. The one with dark skin had short dreadlocks and a chocolate brown trench coat, and the other had shoulder length blonde hair and was wearing a leather jacket and jeans. When they walked up, the two of them saluted immediately. We have come to hire a Guardian. Who will it be for today? It looked like they were in a castle. They walked into a very large room with grandiose pillars and a chandelier that shone like the sun. Just like the realm with the Reapers and Greeters, Lily watched as several interesting characters walked around. However, the characters in the Guardians realm looked completely different. Every person seemed to have different look about them. Lily watched as a large muscular woman wielding an ax walked by them, her brown braided ponytail bouncing up and down on her burly shoulders. A tall thin man also passed by, his long black hair flowing behind him as he gripped a bow. The five year old scooted in a little closer to Death, thinking that some of the people here looked a little scary. As they walked through the large room, Lily watched as the Guardians would walk into a series of glass balls very similar to the ones that she had seen before. The Guardians are in charge of keeping the Inbetween and the people in it safe. Whoever you choose will stay with you and keep you safe on your adventures. There was a rustle from behind it, and soon, the door sprung open, revealing a disgruntled man wearing a white t-shirt stretched over his enormous chest with a whistle hanging around his neck. Lily, this is Mr. Downey stood there for a moment, wondering if this was a joke, when it suddenly dawned on him that the master of the dead would most likely not be joking. He tried to hold in his laughter for a moment, but it soon exploded out of his mouth and echoed in the cavernous room, causing some of the other Guardians to give curious looks. Downey wiped the tears from his eyes and held out his hand to her. He watched them all quickly take down the camp. He looked at all the letters addressed to Sgt. Ashley Downey and then grabbed a roll of toilet paper. Lily soon came back to reality and stared dumbfounded at the buffoon standing in front of her. Downey turned to what looked like a phone on the wall. He picked up the receiver and pushed a button. However, this one is going to be a bit different. You know how this goes. Downey turned to them. They followed the soldiers down some stairs into another monstrous room with a large field with seating surrounding it. Now you get to watch and choose. What if I choose wrong? I trust your judgement. The little girl let out an exasperated breath of air and walked down onto the field. She watched as a young woman with short hair pulled out a little contraption from her belt. She turned some gears, and it extended into a glowing electric dagger and swipe it at a block in front of her. The girl looked back at Lily, looking pleased with herself. Lily nodded curtly and scurried off somewhere else, feeling like all the people around her were too tall and too scary. Lily went from person to person, feeling unsatisfied with everyone she came across. She shook a few of their hands, only to find that some died in battle, or war, or something relatively normal as getting sick. Adamantly, she marched over to the edge of the field and climbed the little wall so she could go up the steps and see better. She was about to climber higher and higher up the steps, when she noticed a man sitting in the seating down at the bottom, his chin resting in his hand, staring at the other Guardians and their displays of strength with a hint of sadness. He was wearing a simple worn, army green jacket, and his mouse brown hair had flecks of gray in it. Curious, she made her way back down the stairs towards him. Lily tilted her head around him partly so he could see her and partly so she could get a better look at him. Worry lines ran along his face, and an occasional white or gray hair stuck out from his chin. And when you walk through it, some items appear on a pedestal for you to use. The little girl held out her hand. Just as she was expecting, Lily was whisked away into a memory that she knew would only last a split second in reality. She was soon watching the man walk down a desolate street in a uniform and army helmet-holding on tightly to a gun. The man stopped when he heard something from one of the old abandoned buildings. He looked around, and then whispered to someone hidden. She was wearing a rather worn looking faded blue dress and a dark coat. My father should be there waiting for me. There were some more soldier standing there. One of them had a red and band on his arm with a black symbol that Lily thought she recognized from somewhere. We can take her from here. We need you to report at the border. We need you at the border. Arno glanced from Eva to the soldiers in front of him as they came closer and closer. He bit his lip. Get out of here. The girl ran as the sound attracted more of the soldiers. Arno was soon knocked to the ground, his helmet falling off and rolling across the cobblestone. He just murders innocent-. I was a German soldier! Lily gave them a dirty look. You should say sorry! And with that, she ran after him. The man in front of her stopped walking, and turned to look at her in disbelief. He had no choice but to let the little girl lead him across the field as slowly, the other Guardians started to notice. Downey said in disgust. Besides-you said I could pick anybody right? Downey grumbled something unintelligible. Downey yelled with a booming voice so loud that Lily had to cover her ears. Iâ€™ never really expected to ever be chosen They can see past what everyone else can to the heart of what makes someone who they are. Make sure to take care of her. In the middle of the room, was a type of archway with something silvery and transparent stretched across it-almost like a thin sheet of water. This is the place you were saying? And then Arno- saying his name with slight disgust you should know what to do. Lily slowly reached into the archway, the silvery stuff in the middle feeling like the cold vapors of a cloud around her hand. It tingled a bit. Lily laughed because it tickled, causing Arno to give a small smile. She looked ahead at him through the archway, a shimmering blue version of him. I Arno Falkenrath vow to do everything in my power to protect and defend Lily Hoagen in whatever danger may come our way. Even if it comes to my own harm. The two of them looked around, unsure if they had done something wrong.

6: The Soldier Apprentice - Platformer Game by sack

The Apprentice is back for another series. And, fortunately, so are the ridiculous introductory statements from the candidates. "I'm the Beyoncé of business," claims one in the opening episode.

This was necessary because of the lack of educational training of many of the soldiers who decided to remain in the services after these two conflicts; many of these had joined the military at a young age and in many cases had not finished their education in the rush to help defend freedom in the world at that time. Canadian Army Badge With the above in mind, a program was designed and implemented where young men between the ages of 16 and 17 no younger and no older were recruited into a seven-year program of which the first two years were a combination of military training, trades training, and additional schooling. A half day of military and a half day of scholastic training were involved during most of this two-year time frame. A graduate after this two-year period usually had increased his educational level by two grades and was also trades trained to the Group 1 level in his chosen trade. Upon graduating after two years of intensive training, the apprentices were assigned to various military units and still had five years to serve with their option of taking their release after three years. Thus it was a minimum term of five years before one could officially take his release. Royal Canadian Air Force Ensign Career as a soldier Many graduates made the military their lifelong career and obtained promotions well beyond the goals of the initial program and became officers, up to the rank of lieutenant - general in charge of Canadian Land Forces. Many artillery apprentice graduates changed their corps during their military careers and pursued very successful careers in other corps such as the Engineers, Dental Corps, Signal Corps, Intelligence Corps, Service Corps and the Royal Canadian Air Force among others. Leading into other careers Others left the military life after five to seven years and even later and pursued civilian careers with equal success in most cases. Civilian careers pursued, just to name a few, were careers in the chemical research field, hydraulics where one individual holds several international patents on his designs, dental fields, prosthetics, insurance company executive, real estate, technicians at major airports, air traffic controllers and many others. Perhaps the longest serving apprentice in defense conditions. A Canadian military unit, returning from Iraq, presented him with a Ranger pin in a ceremony at Philadelphia Airport in Benefits The two-year portion of the apprentice training program molded the minds and formed the discipline of these young men to face life with a very positive approach and to achieve the goals that they set for themselves. It also formed a union that has lasted over 50 years that one can relate to when two apprentices meet again, even among other intakes formerly unknown. Graduates Most graduates of the program are emphatic in stating that they would do it all over again, and would recommend such a program for their children and grandchildren. Many members feel that they were well trained and given discipline and courage to face life even under the most trying of times. In , 36 years after the last graduating class graduated and 49 years after the first Artillery Apprentices appeared in Shilo, Manitoba, the first ever all-intake reunion was held with great success. Another Artillery Apprentice all-intake reunion is planned in Apprentices from several other corps also hold reunions. This year "Op Greenflash" will be held the weekend of Aug 25, It is available on amazon.
