His parents were Alexander Grieg " , a merchant and vice-consul in Bergen; and Gesine Judithe Hagerup " , a music teacher and daughter of solicitor and politician Edvard Hagerup. Edvard Grieg was raised in a musical family. His mother was his first piano teacher and taught him to play at the age of six. Grieg studied in several schools, including Tanks Upper Secondary School. He disliked the discipline of the conservatory course of study. An exception was the organ , which was mandatory for piano students. In the spring of , he survived two life-threatening lung diseases , pleurisy and tuberculosis. He suffered from numerous respiratory infections, and ultimately developed combined lung and heart failure. Grieg was admitted many times to spas and sanatoria both in Norway and abroad. Several of his doctors became his personal friends. He met the Danish composers J. Hartmann and Niels Gade. He also met his fellow Norwegian composer Rikard Nordraak composer of the Norwegian national anthem , who became a good friend and source of inspiration. Nordraak died in , and Grieg composed a funeral march in his honor. The next year, their only child, Alexandra, was born. Alexandra died in from meningitis. Grieg himself was unable to be there due to conducting commitments in Christiania now Oslo. The two men met in Rome in On his second visit in April, Grieg brought with him the manuscript of his Piano Concerto, which Liszt proceeded to sightread including the orchestral arrangement. Liszt also gave Grieg some advice on orchestration for example, to give the melody of the second theme in the first movement to a solo trumpet. Grieg had close ties with the Bergen Philharmonic Orchestra Harmonien , and later became Music Director of the orchestra from to In , Grieg met Tchaikovsky in Leipzig. Grieg was struck by the greatness of Tchaikovsky. In the spring of , Grieg made nine rpm gramophone recordings of his piano music in Paris; all of these historic discs have been reissued on both LPs and CDs, despite limited fidelity. Grieg also made live-recording player piano music rolls for the Hupfeld Phonola piano-player system and Welte-Mignon reproducing system, all of which survive today and can be heard. In , Grieg cancelled his concerts in France in protest of the Dreyfus Affair , an anti-semitic scandal that was then roiling French politics. Regarding this scandal, Grieg had written that he hoped that the French might, "Soon return to the spirit of , when the French republic declared that it would defend basic human rights. In a interview, Grieg stated: He is a genius that we Scandinavians cannot do other than love. He had suffered a long period of illness. His last words were "Well, if it must be so. Grieg was cremated, and his ashes were entombed in a mountain crypt near his house, Trolldhaugen. After the death of his wife, her ashes were later placed alongside his. He also wrote three violin sonatas and a cello sonata.
