Keep in mind I am only counting the first ten. Without further adieu here we go! Friday The 13th Part 5: In the vein of Halloween 3: Season of the witch, that had nothing to do with Michael Myers this movie had very little to do with Jason. A year after Tommy Jarvis met Jason for the first time he is sent to a half way house for troubled children. Not long after his arrival one of the teenagers, a mentally challenged boy is murdered by a house mate with anger issues. Soon after someone is murdering the rest of the teenagers. Has Jason returned or is someone using his M O? While it was a good movie with some decent death scenes, one has to think it was a cop out not really being Jason. Friday The 13th Part 8: A Senior graduation cruise trip to New York. What could go wrong? Also why did Jason turn back into a child in the sewers? Though the poster is pretty cool though 8. Jason X Jason in space, enough said. Jason tries to be reborn through the baby of a relative. Friday The 13th part 7: This one is kind of like Jason vs Carrie as Jason faces off against a girl with telekinetic powers. In a bit of an ironic twist, where Jason has mommy issues, this girl has daddy issues. Friday The 13th part 6: Jason Lives Tommy Jarvis returns once again, this time to make sure Jason stays dead. Unfortunately his good intentions are spoiled as once he stabs Jason through the chest with a piece of metal fence, a freak lightning storm hits the metal, bringing Jason back to life. This was the beginning of slow Jason. IF we can find it 4. Friday The 13th Part 2 The first movie entirely with Jason with a potato sack on his head. Friday The 13th Part 3 Great for its time 3D effects, and the movie where Jason gets his iconic hockey mask. This is where the series really began in my opinion 2. Friday The 13th Where it all began. The rarity of a female serial killer. It was basically a role reversal of Psycho and it worked. Friday The 13th Part 4: It almost had the most funny memorable lines. Until next time stay away from Camp Blood!

We have reached the all-important Top 10 is Brown Eyed Handsome Man: Berry was inspired to write this song while he was touring through heavily black and Latino areas of California. Altschuler argued that the lyrics of the song "played slyly with racial attitudes and even fears. Chuck Berry was 30 years old when he sat down to write School Days, a. It was written and first released in If only for the verse: Released in the late spring of , it reached 21 on the UK single charts. At 5 we find Sweet Little Sixteen. Rolling Stone magazine ranked the song number on its list of the " Greatest Songs of All Time" in Sitting pretty at 4 is Rock and Roll Music: He made playful jabs at Jazz, Mambo and Tango, styles that were popular at the time, and clearly outlined what Rock was, from its backbeat to its wailing saxes. At 3 is the song with which it all began for Berry: By the time of the May 21st, , session, Berry had been playing Country tunes for black audiences for a few years "After they laughed at me a few times, they began requesting the hillbilly stuff," he has said. Leonard Chess came up with the title, inspired by a Maybelline mascara box lying on the floor at the Chess studio. DJ Alan Freed had nothing to do with writing Maybellene, although he got co-credit and royalties for years in return for radio airplay: At 2 is the song that most lists have at 1. The opening guitar riff of Johnny B. Goode is based in fact. The title character is Chuck Berry "more or less," as he told Rolling Stone in And Johnny "never ever learned to read or write so well," while Berry graduated from beauty school with a degree in hairdressing and cosmetology. In , Berry was working as a beautician in St. Unlike Presley, Berry wrote his own classics. There are dozens of cover versions, the best being the one by Jimi Hendrix: We always had food on the table. As with every Berry classic, this has been recorded over and over by a multitude of artists. The most successful versions were the ones by the Beatles and by the Electric Light Orchestra.

Kanye West and 50 Cent: It was on and Park that Mr. Jackson announced that their albums would be going head-to-head on September 11, When the first week sales came in, Kanye was victorious and Graduation outsold Curtis by a little over , units. When Michelle Obama appeared on the show, she was shown the utmost respect and rightfully so. Her time on the air was a great balance of fun questions with positive messages. Lil Wayne Kisses Birdman: With all the current tension in the Cash Money Camp, memories of happier times within the crew seem to be fading further and further away. The picture of Birdman and Weezy kissing years ago got a lot of attention, but some people forget that Wayne kissed him on TV too. It was obvious no one expected to see what they saw. A very memorable moment in and Park history is when Terrence was taking shots at Rocsi, and she ended up walking out because of it. Terrence then used an audience member to be his co-host in order close out the show. Jin Dominates "Freestyle Friday": It not only put a spotlight on aspiring emcees, but it also provided a national platform for battle rapping. And of all the talent that was showcased, no one left a more lasting impression than Jin. He was such a standout that his undefeated streak even earned him a deal with Ruff Ryders Entertainment. The poorly received recent television biopic about Aaliyah made many of her fans cherish this even more - her final televised interview which took place only days prior to her fatal plane crash. 5: Countdown (Australian TV series) - Wikipedia

Get this from a library! Have a new teenager by Friday: from mouthy and moody to respectful and responsible in 5 days. [Kevin Leman] -- Psychologist and author Dr. Kevin Leman shows parents how to establish boundaries, gain respect, and turn problem behaviors around with their teenager in five days.

Cultural influence[edit] Teen-oriented pop music still enjoyed strong popularity during the s, although much of it was sourced from overseas, and the proportion of Australian acts in the charts had hit an all-time low by That trend began to change around , and many credit that largely to the advent of Countdown. Because of this, Countdown was also one of the first Australian TV series to be made entirely in colour. Because of its receptivity to music videos something of a necessity because of the comparative rarity of tours by overseas acts Countdown proved to be instrumental in the worldwide success of a number of important overseas acts of the period. Madonna achieved her first hit single in April when " Holiday " was screened on Countdown. Subsequently, " Burning Up " reached the top twenty following repeated showings of the video clip on the show; this second song was not a hit in other countries. The popularity of Countdown started to lose momentum by the mids. Music videos were often shown, rather than the artists performing live in the studio. It was cheaper to produce with videos and this led to Countdown having no significant difference from any other music video program shown on TV during this time. Meldrum co-hosted with, and interviewed, Carol Hitchcock and Jim Keays. Meldrum made his appearance at the end of the show wearing his well-known Stetson hat. Meldrum saluted the music industry and fans and then bared his shaved head to the audience. In March , pay television channel Foxtel , and its regional affiliate Austar , began screening hundreds of studio performances from the Countdown era. Themed Countdown specials have become very popular and lost performances by John Farnham , drag queen Divine, a-ha , Pseudo Echo and the Countdown Dancers performing the Flashdance medley highlight the great music of the period. Prince Charles Interview[edit] This section does not cite any sources. Please help improve this section by adding citations to reliable sources. Unsourced material may be challenged and removed. Meldrum was extremely nervous about interviewing the prince and botched a great many takes during the interview by flubbing his lines and even committing several royal protocol blunders. Members of his production crew gave him constant encouragement between takes and eventually Prince Charles politely asked Meldrum if he could get a teleprompter to assist him with the interview, to which Meldrum replied that there was not one available. The interview, or rather, the numerous botched takes from it, has become a staple of blooper shows in Australia. In the book Glad All Over [6] Michael Shrimpton said at that time the ABC were "run by financial types [who] suddenly discovered that the increase in the purchase of video tapes had roared up percent in 12 months". An order came through from middle-management Bill Pritchard to erase a whole wall of tapes. Ted Emery and Paul Drane heard about the order, surreptitiously removing as many reels as they could during the middle of the night and hiding them in their cars. That includes the first episode broadcast in colour. With the exception of 30 episodes, all programs aired between and were erased; only two episodes which aired in are known to exist. Most of the episodes erased originally aired from to , but there are other episodes either missing or too damaged for future airing, the latter of which are most likely held only for research purposes. According to Ted Emery, it was not just episodes of Countdown that were affected by the purge. In recent years, ABC Archives has undertaken an upgrade of the remaining episodes, copying what was left to its two on-air playback formats Betacam SP and Digital Betacam. It is the copying of the programs onto this format that has allowed the ABC to re-broadcast episodes of Countdown during its all-night music show, Rage in place of video clips which would normally air during that timeslot. The duo were fired by the ABC after an unauthorised on-air protest on 22 June against the policy of not allowing acts to perform live and insisting they mime to backup tracks. The show continued until its cancellation in December The program aired 6: The hour long Batdance competition was a high rating show in November where Molly Meldrum aided in the judging of the talent from the state finalists.

Episode one aired on 7 February and episode two on 14 February. It tells of the rise and fall of Countdown, its production struggles and various other tales about the music groups that went on it. The show received predominantly positive ratings. Countdown [edit] The show lived up to its name when it angered devoted viewers by slashing its top 50 in mid and playing videos freeform. But nearly a decade after that controversial decision, a new segment called "The Chart" hit the silver screen. Voice over narration is supplied by recording artists who appeared on the show. The show had the Countdown theme song and some of the same graphics. Ian "Molly" Meldrum did not return to host. The stage also had the Countdown logo. Compilation Albums [edit] A series of popular CD compilations have been released by ABC Music, with selective tracks as featured on the original series.
