Edit Fang was hired by Eggman to capture Rayman, which Fang accepted in return for a Chaos Emerald which will be revealed to be fake. Fang was also given a tracker to track Rayman down or his shoe, anyway. He eventually found Rayman but accidentally crashed into Shadow, knocking him out. After discussing what was about to happen to the amused Rayman, he eventually got into a fight with him. However, Fang reported back to Eggman with the still unconscious Shadow, whom Eggman roboticised. After gaining this powerful and robotic ally, Fang and the new Mecha Shadow ambushed Rayman by planting a land mine under where he was about to stand, and then attacking when the mine was detonated. Later that night, Fang tried once again to ambush Rayman, but got distracted by the appearance of Black Doom and many of the other Sonic Baddies, and was left behind by Rayman. After receiving a beating from the baddies, Fang then tried to attack Rayman and his friends in an army tank, but was defeated by me. Fang dropped a rock on top of Mecha Shadow, which brought his memory back and remembered his mission: It was then when Rayman and friends decided to screw everything and just attack Fang and Mecha Shadow. With Fang tied up and angry, Rayman interrogated him with what happened to Shadow. After a while, Shadow was brought back to normal and decided to take his anger and frustration out on Fang- the one who captured him. Later, Fang tried to capture Rayman again, but got a spell put under him and Rayman by Kamek the Magikoopa, making them swap bodies for a day. Unfortunatly, all Eggman saw was Rayman threatning Fang in front of his eyes and to decided to capture who he thought was Rayman, but was actually Fang. Then, things got a bit more complicated. Sonic broke in and thought that Eggman had captured Rayman and Fang for some reason. Ly the Fairy then appeared and released the spell, before teleporting Sonic and Rayman to safety. Fang then went to a house that he saw Rayman enter, to find that not only Rayman had left, but this house belonged to Rfarleydude, and Rfarleydude was very angry that Fang had intruded into his house, and so shot Fang with a Wii Zapper. Fang then had to spend the next episode in hospital. After a fight, Fang managed to knock Rayman out, but was interrupted by Roger Rabbid breaking in and zapping Fang with the Evolutiray, turning him into a baby. With his new intelligence, he would capture Rayman and bring him to the lab, where Roger would be able to kill him. With Globox as a hostage, Fang threatened Rayman but, unfortunately, Rayman would not co-operate and did not believe that Fang would actually shoot Globox. However, Fang then shot Globox to prove that he was serious. However, before Fang could do anything else, he was arrested by Geoffrey St. John and his muscular assistant Tim. However, with his intelligence, he managed to break out of jail and knocked out Sonic to try and use the same thing as he did with Globox. However, Conker then appeared and decided to attack Fang and almost kill him due to his troubled past with Weasles. Then, the police came and arrested Fang. Personality Edit Fang has a mean, cold and greedy personality, doing anything if the price is right. He is always equipped for the situation and he often gets the job done. Although, he does often let his cockiness get the best of him and can make him fail miserably.

The Weasels are supporting antagonists who first appeared in The Adventures of Ichabod and Mr. Toad. They are a gang of crafty thieves and crooks who serve the interests of their boss, Mr. Winkie.

Edit In their original film, the Weasels were hired by Mr. Winkie in an attempt to steal the deed to Toad Hall. Thaddeus Toad is brought to court for allegedly stealing a red motorcar. Toad is instantly enamored by the sight of the automobile, going so far as to smelling the fuel emitting from the muffler, and decides to seek out the "owners". Toad steps inside the tavern where the weasels are seen scheming at a table until they finally notice him walk in. He approaches the tavernkeeper, Winkie, at the bar and asks him as to who owns the "hot-looking car. However, having no money on him at the time, Toad instead proposes to trade Toad Hall for the car, a bargain the weasels quickly and eagerly accept. The heroes hatch a plan and go to Toad Hall to retrieve the deed. One of the weasels is keeping watch and is alerted of their presence. He quietly follows them into Toad Hall, where Winkie and the other weasels are drunk for too much beer. Just as Mole is about to take the deed back, but the guard weasel stops them and wakes his boss and comrades. After a dangerous and comical game of keep-away, Toad and his friends escape with the deed. It is assumed that Winkie and the weasels were sent to prison afterwards. Early on, he threatens Goofy with a gun. At another point, he serves Goofy a martini laced with a goofball and then leaves him to drown underwater with his feet set in concrete. At another point during the chase, the weasel places a travel billboard in the path of the other cars, so that they will drive off the road. He also engages Pete in a shootout between the cars. They also appear as the main enemies in the "Prince and the Pauper" level of Mickey Mania: The Timeless Adventures of Mickey Mouse. There are two kinds of such enemies here:
