Many people find ferrets nice to have and as easy to keep, if not easier, as other typical pets like dogs and cats. Here are some basic tips about caring for ferrets. Making a Home for the Ferret Ferrets prefer living in spaces that resemble dens in the wild. A wired cage that is about 30 inches wide, 18 inches deep, and 18 inches long may suffice. Many ferrets like living in cages that have things to climb such as ramps and stairs. The cage should allow good ventilation, thus it is not wise to use aquariums. The floor may be covered by linoleum tiles and carpets or other soft washable materials to make the flooring more comfortable for ferrets to walk on than wire floors. The cage should be kept within 55 to 70 degrees. It should also be cleaned regularly with hot soapy water. Chicken and turkey are ideal. Ferrets should never be fed vegetables because they are difficult to digest. Fruits are also not an option because sugars may increase tendencies for insulinoma. Egg whites should also be avoided because they can cause hemolytic anemia. Potty Training A small 3 to 5 inches-high cardboard box may be used as a litter box for ferrets. Litter products made of plant or paper fibers are recommended to prevent clumping of fecal matter. Keeping Ferrets Clean Ferrets tend to produce undesirable odors. To prevent them from smelling too strongly, they can be bathed using a special ferret shampoo, kitten shampoo, or diluted baby shampoo. Ears should be cleaned using cotton soaked in a special cleanser that can be bought from a pet store. Keeping Ferrets Active Ferrets are very energetic animals. Ferrets can be nice pets when one knows the right ways of caring for them. Having them can be a fun and exciting experience.
