He is eccentric, enthusiastic, and cheerful even in the face of danger, and is also known for his exaggerated facial features; specifically, his enormous nose, large and bushy mustache, out-sticking ears, and prominently front teeth. He is an expert zoologist, as well as naturalist, traveler and survivalist and is quite caring and logical though Nigel often otherwise appears absent minded or naive. In the series, Nigel is a supporting character, but in the film Rugrats Go Wild , Nigel plays a much larger role as he is idolized by Tommy Pickles who usually refers to him as "Mr. Later in a bathysphere , Nigel whacks his head, which causes his memory to come back. This was much to the horror of the orangutan mother and the local villagers, who came to know about their deaths. Out of gratitude and love, the mother orangutan took Donnie and raised him as a son. One day, however, she came across the Thornberrys and decided to give Donnie to them so he could have a human family. She watched tearfully along with her son as he was welcomed into their family as their own. He babbles wildly and makes animal-sounds but nothing Eliza can understand , occasionally spouting bits of English or exhibiting intermittent signs of sophistication. Donnie is 5, turning 6 in "The Origin of Donnie", and it is presumed he does not know what happened to his parents. It is revealed that he was able to pick up sign language from watching his parents teaching it to orangutans. We only see him sign one word family , and it is unclear how much he knows. Debbie dresses in grunge clothing and sports a distinctive peekaboo hairstyle. Darwin voiced by Tom Kane is a chimpanzee. He speaks with a distinct, upper-class, and English accent even when he is cautious for good reason since Eliza at times tries to foolishly approach and socialize with potentially dangerous animals lions, for example.
