Elizabeth Ahlgrim on July 9, at 9: Her books are well laid-out, too, with good page turns and legible print, and not too difficult, so that you can throw together a program quickly. Participant amy-walts on July 10, at 4: Excellent and lovely arrangements by two outstanding musicians, including some lovely pieces for weddings. I suppose tradition varies by region and interpretation. Participant diane-michaels on July 10, at 7: Participant unknown-user on July 11, at Some of those are published. Another one is called By the Shores of Kinneret. There are additional Klezmer-style tunes you can find in Klezmer collections. Dewey Owens has a collection also, that was carefully chosen with Jewish advisors. Participant unknown-user on July 30, at 5: I selected all Participant unknown-user on July 30, at 8: Rabbis are not necessarily well-trained in music, as are cantors, so you may need advice from more than one source. Klezmer music is another source for tunes, especially recessional and after. Simon Tov is indeed awkward with all those repeated notes in the melody. One solution is to play them as alternating octaves like in d minor: Mazel Tov adf a-a-g -a fed works better and they can be played in sequence, so you only have to do Simon Tov once. Participant unknown-user on July 30, at 9: It helps to have ideas of how to develop a song stylistically, especially if it is Sephardic, and then I could write out my ideas on the sparer page. One thing that would help in terms of lighting is to have the notes bigger or all the printing more bold. Reform, Reconstructionist, Secular Humanist no G-d words , etc. Participant amy-walts on July 31, at 4: It would help harpists who are less familiar with Jewish repertoire make much more educated suggestions to brides. Keep those lovely arrangements and suggestions coming, Sunita!
