The collision with the iceberg dashed all of these dreams simultaneously, and the subsequent transformation of character of the passengers and crew had, it seemed to me, the potential for great emotional and musical expression onstage. You have to dare greatly, and I really want to stretch the bounds of the kind of expression in musical theater," Yeston explained. That was very exciting. Astonishingly, Titanic manages to be grave and entertaining, somber and joyful; little by little you realize that you are in the presence of a genuine addition to American musical theatre. Productions[edit] original Broadway production[edit] Titanic opened on April 23, at the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre [6] and ran for performances and 27 previews, closing on March 21, The set encompassed three levels to help form the impression of the size of the ship. The show received five Tony nominations, winning in all five categories, though the director, Richard Jones, was not nominated, nor were any of the performers. Paul Gallo was responsible for the lighting design. Steve Canyon Kennedy was responsible for the sound design. Ensemble Version[edit] In original Broadway cast member Don Stephenson , who created the part of Charles Clarke, developed a new chamber version of Titanic in collaboration with choreographer Liza Gennaro. This scaled down production used 20 actors playing all of the roles, an abstract set design, projections of the actual ship and passengers, and new orchestrations designed to make the score sound as if it was being played by the ships band. Material that had been previously cut from the original Broadway production was put back into the show, and existing material was reordered and reassigned. Stephenson subsequently remounted this production in hopes of an eventual Broadway revival at Westchester Broadway Theatre in Elmsford, New York in January This concert was produced by Manhattan Concert Productions and featured a chorus of singers from across the country. It was conducted by original musical director, music supervisor, and conductor Kevin Stites, choreographed by Liza Gennaro, and directed by Don Stephenson. It was also highly successful, and produced an original cast recording sung in Dutch as a companion to the original Broadway cast recording on RCA Records. On 7 December , a German production opened in Hamburg, a copy of the Dutch production. A cast recording was made in German. A new song was written for the German production, "Drei Tage" Three Days , but the song was not included on cast album. The Belfast Operatic Company performed the show again, in the Grand Opera House, Belfast, on the week the ship sailed, from 10 April to 14 April , with a special performance beginning at Bruce Ismay, and Cory Doran as Barrett. Staged with full orchestra and member cast, the run was extended twice due to popular demand. A Japanese engagement played from January to February Directed by Pat Evans, musical direction by Geraint Bessant, the performance included a special gala event on the 14th April to mark years to the day the tragedy struck. On February 9, , Ballinrobe Musical Society, under the direction of Peter Kennedy, performed the first ever production to take place in the Republic of Ireland. The show ran from 9 to 16 February. Michael Coen played Captain Edward Smith. On April 26, , the musical company Scenario premiered the show in Kolbotn, Norway. The show ran from the 26th of April to the 12th of May. Titanic has been translated into seven languages: Titanic becoming the newest feat once thought impossible. Bruce Ismay , Andrews, and Captain E. Smith congratulate each other on being the owner, designer, and captain of "The Largest Moving Object" in the world. The Titanic sets sail, and the assembled company wishes her a safe crossing "Godspeed Titanic". Now at sea, Ismay arrives on the bridge to inform Smith that he plans for the Titanic to arrive in New York on Tuesday afternoon rather than Wednesday morning, while Andrews insists that the maiden voyage be a safe one. As the voyage continues, Ismay demands increasingly more speed, so the ship can build an impressive reputation. In Second Class, Alice Beane longs for the grandeur that is First Class, while her husband Edgar, a successful hardware store owner, is content with their station. Charles Clarke, who is traveling to America to become a journalist, is accompanied by his fiancée Caroline Neville. In First Class, the titans of industry recount the accomplishments that man has recently achieved, with the Titanic becoming the pinnacle. Kate McGowan is smitten with a young man traveling with them, Jim Farrell. Alice Beane has managed to infiltrate their ranks, though she is turned away several times by an alert steward. Edgar finds her and the two argue over their lifestyle choices "I Have Danced". As evening draws near, the temperature drops, and lookout Fleet finds the weather conditions difficult for spotting icebergs "No Moon". On deck, Kate McGowan tells Farrell that she needs to marry as she is carrying the child of a married man, and he accepts. Suddenly, Fleet spots an iceberg and alerts the bridge. Act 2 The stewards begin waking the confused passengers, while they themselves do not have much information "Wake Up, Wake Up". Smith arrives on the bridge and is briefed on the situation. He orders all passengers to put on life vests, for Bride to begin sending distress messages, and for Andrews to inspect the damage. Andrews informs Smith and Ismay that the damage inflicted is more than the ship is designed to endure and that the ship will sink, reminding them that there are only enough lifeboats for less than half of the people aboard. In the First Class Dining Salon, passengers refuse to believe that anything is wrong with the ship and are annoyed at being awakened in the middle of the night "Dressed in Your Pyjamas in the Grand Salon". Crew members are assuring them that there is no reason to panic. All the passengers and crew members quickly hurry to the lifeboats. In Third Class, the three Kates and Farrell attempt to find a way up to boat deck, but are unable to until they are assisted by Barrett "The Staircase". Smith arrives in the radio room where Bride informs him that only the Carpathia is near enough to help, but is unable to arrive until after the Titanic has sunk. Smith, Andrews, and Ismay argue over responsibility for the disaster "The Blame". Women and children are ordered into the lifeboats, while the men are forced to stay behind "To the Lifeboats". The bellboy tells the captain that all the life boats have been launched, and that those remaining aboard accept their fate. Murdoch tells the Captain that he takes full responsibility for the accident, but Smith forgives him and then laments on how he had gone his entire career without experiencing any accident. Isidor and Ida Straus Ida had refused to leave her husband behind affirm their long-lasting love for one another "Still". He visualizes redesigning her as well as the final moments of the souls left aboard as the ship sinks beneath the waves "Mr. In the early hours of the morning, the survivors are rescued by the Carpathia. Many of them recount the tragedy of the Titanic, mourning the loss of people and ship. Bride and Ismay, along with several of the survivors, discuss the possibilities that could have prevented the disaster "The Foundering".
