Plot[edit] To Rome with Love tells four unrelated stories taking place in Rome. Jerry convinces a reluctant Giancarlo to audition in front of a room of opera bigwigs, but Giancarlo performs poorly in this setting. Michelangelo accuses Jerry of embarrassing his father and trying to use him to revive his own failed career, which in turn breeds discontent between Michelangelo and Hayley. This is a great success, so Jerry and Giancarlo decide to stage the opera Pagliacci, with an incongruous shower present in all scenes. Giancarlo receives rave reviews, while Jerry is unaware that he has again been slammed as he has been called "imbecille" "stupid" in Italian. Giancarlo decides to retire from opera singing, because he prefers working as a mortician and spending time with his family. But he appreciates being given the chance to live his dream of performing Pagliacci, and his success has mended the relationship between Michelangelo and Hayley. She becomes lost and loses her cell phone, but ends up at a film shoot where she meets Luca Salta, an actor she idolizes. He invites her to lunch. Back at the hotel, Antonio is worried Milly will be late for their lunch date with his aunts and uncles. Anna, a prostitute, then arrives, having mistakenly been sent to his room. Despite his protests, she wrestles him into a compromising position just as his relatives arrive; the only way he can think to save face is to introduce Anna as Milly, and he convinces her to pose as Milly. The group goes to lunch at the same restaurant Luca takes Milly. Anna and Antonio walk in the garden, and Antonio talks about how pure Milly is. When Anna finds out he was a virgin before meeting Milly, she seduces him in the bushes. Meanwhile, Luca tries to seduce Milly at his hotel room. Milly decides to have sex with him, but then an armed thief emerges and demands their valuables. Milly and the thief climb into bed and fool Mrs. Salta into believing the hotel room is theirs while Luca hides in the bathroom. Once his wife has left, Luca runs off. The burglar flirts with Milly and she has sex with him instead. When she returns to the hotel room, she and Antonio decide to return to their rustic hometown—but first they begin to make love. Inexplicably, he wakes up one morning to discover that he has become a national celebrity. Paparazzi document his every move. Reporters ask him what he had for breakfast, if he wears boxers or briefs, whether he thinks it will rain or which hand he scratches. Leopoldo even becomes a manager at his company, and Serafina sleeps with him. He begins dating models and attending fancy film premieres. The constant attention wears on him, though. One day, in the middle of interviewing Leopoldo, the paparazzi spot a man "who looks more interesting," and they abandon Leopoldo. At first, Leopoldo welcomes the return to his old life. But one afternoon he breaks down when no one asks for his autograph. Leopoldo has learned that life can be monotonous and wearying whether one is a celebrity or a normal man. Still, it is much better to be a weary celebrity than it is to be a weary regular man. He had lived there some thirty years ago, and he would rather revisit his old haunts than go sightseeing with the others. While looking for his old apartment building, John meets Jack Jesse Eisenberg, an American architecture student who recognizes him. Throughout the rest of the story, John appears as a quasi-real and quasi-imaginary figure around Jack and makes unusually frank observations of events. John predicts Monica will bring trouble, and John keeps telling Jack that Monica will lead him to trouble. Even though John cautions Jack against cheating with Monica, he begins to succumb to her charms. Sally sets Monica up with Leonardo, one of their friends, and Jack is jealous of their relationship. One night he and Monica decide to cook dinner for Sally and Leonardo. They flirt more and more until Jack kisses Monica; they go down to his car to have sex. Jack, now besotted with her, plans to leave Sally for Monica, but they decide Jack should wait until Sally finishes her midterms for Jack to break up with her. They make plans to travel to Greece and Sicily together. Then Monica gets a phone call from her agent who says she has been offered a role in a Hollywood blockbuster. She will film in Los Angeles and Tokyo for the next five months and she immediately becomes completely focused on preparing for the role. She forgets about traveling with Jack, who realizes how shallow she is. John and Jack walk back to the Roman street corner where they met and they part ways. It is loosely implied that Sally is now his wife.

Eunice Gayson as Sylvia Trench: Francis de Wolff as Vavra: Chief of a Gypsy tribe used for dirty work by Kerim Bey. George Pastell as the Orient Express train conductor. Fred Haggerty as Krilencu: A Bulgarian assassin who works as a killer for the Soviets in the Balkans. Two jealous Gypsy girls who are disputing the same man. Production[edit] Following the financial success of Dr. No, United Artists greenlit a second James Bond film. Strangelove and was replaced by Dr. The film introduced several conventions which would become essential elements of the series: In the end credits, Blofeld is credited with a question mark. However, screen credit for Llewelyn was omitted at the opening of the film and is reserved for the exit credits, where he is credited simply as "Boothroyd". Bianchi started taking English classes for the role, but the producers ultimately chose to have her lines redubbed by British stage actress Barbara Jefford in the final cut. Terence Young cast Austrian singer Lotte Lenya after hearing one of her musical recordings. This led to the casting of Vladek Sheybal , whom Young also considered convincing as an intellectual. Though visibly in pain, he continued working as long as possible. When he could no longer work, he returned home and took his own life. Locations included the Basilica Cistern , Hagia Sophia and the Sirkeci railway station , which also was used for the Belgrade and Zagreb railway stations. In the film, the train journey was set in Eastern Europe. The journey and the truck ride were shot in Argyll , Scotland and Switzerland. The end scenes for the film were shot in Venice. It had a tear gas bomb that detonated if the case was improperly opened, a folding AR-7 sniper rifle with twenty rounds of ammunition, a throwing knife, and 50 gold sovereigns. A boxer at Cambridge , Young choreographed the fight between Grant and Bond along with stunt coordinator Peter Perkins. The scene took three weeks to film and was violent enough to worry some on the production. Robert Shaw and Connery did most of the stunts themselves. Editor Peter Hunt set about editing the film while key elements were still to be filmed, helping to restructure the opening scenes. Hunt and Young came up with the idea of moving the Red Grant training sequence to the beginning of the film prior to the main title , a signature feature that has been an enduring hallmark of every Bond film since. The speedboats could not go fast enough due to the many waves in the sea, [29] and a rented boat filled with cameras ended up sinking in the Bosphorus. We had the strangest week, and really came away with nothing, except a lot of ridiculous stories. He composed it to have a lighter, enthusiastic and more adventurous theme to relax the audience. No music; the post-rocket-launch music from Dr. No is played in From Russia with Love during the helicopter and speedboat attacks. Neither is it great film-making. But it sure is fun. The set-pieces are a stunning box of tricks". For this mad melodramatization of a desperate adventure of Bond with sinister characters in Istanbul and on the Orient Express is fictional exaggeration on a grand scale and in a dashing style, thoroughly illogical and improbable, but with tongue blithely wedged in cheek. But the yocks are more memorable. They result from slight but sly infractions of the thriller formula. We worry about them and hope their relationship will work out Shaw and Lotte Lenya are splendid villains. Both have exciting, well-choreographed fights with Connery. Actors play it straight, with excellent results. From Russia with Love is effectively paced and plotted, features a gallery of detestable rogues including the ultimate Bond villain, Blofeld , and offers countless thrills". Wilson , the current co-producer of the series, stated "We always start out trying to make another From Russia with Love and end up with another Thunderball. It follows the storyline of the book and film, albeit adding in new scenes, making it more action-oriented. Most of the cast from the film returned in likeness. Featuring a third-person multiplayer deathmatch mode, the game depicts several elements of later Bond films, such as the Aston Martin DB5 from Goldfinger and the rocketbelt from Thunderball

The year-old, from Essex, was one of the six original hunks sent into the villa for the fourth series. From the very start there were more gags made about those blinding gnashers than anything else. One Islander even joked the Turkey-made pegs glowed in the dark. But forget the teeth, who exactly is he? What was his Love Island journey? Dani was smitten with her man from the start Image: After that they were inseparable, giggling and PG smooching the day away whenever they got the chance. They went on a sweet date to the beach and Dani chose him again when it came recoupling, despite his terrible shirt - a clear sign it was love. He returned the compliments when it came to the boys choosing to recouple and shortly after he decided to make it official with his sweetheart and asked her to be his girlfriend. She, of course accepted and the Islanders all jumped into the pool fully clothed to express their joy. However when she saw a text that revealed Ellie was in the other villa with her man, Dani had a mini meltdown. It was all fine when he walked back in alone though and they declared their "love" for each other that night. But she had to put up with living alongside Ellie when she coupled up with Sam Bird. Things got even more serious as they watched the sun rise Image: Their relationship went to the next stage no, not the naked cuddle one on an incredibly romantic date in a hot air balloon to watch the sunrise. She said yes, of course. Dani Dyer and Jack Fincham crowned champions and plan to celebrate by having sex The public and bookmakers were totally invested in them too and they ended up winning the entire series, with Caroline Flack announcing the results in the live final. What was he looking for before the show? Jack Fincham was hoping to meet a girl with class Image: I want to find a bond with someone.
