To lead the way for Toyota with a culture that respects all people and recognizes that our diverse backgrounds and insights are a resource that will help the company grow and become even more successful in the future. It is something that makes Toyota distinctive. I believe that Toyota is really smart about how the board is formed and how the company utilizes the collective expertise and experience of its members. One thing that has not and will not change is our commitment to diversity and inclusion in every aspect of our business. Embracing diversity and inclusion, particularly during this period of change makes us more aware of different perspectives so we can be more proactive in how we approach challenges. A diverse and inclusive culture also prepares us to be open to new perspectives and be more agile, resilient and innovative in our approach to problem solving. The more we open our minds to other points of view, the better we work together. And, the better we work together, the greater an organization TFS will become. While reading this report, I hope you find a story, or two, that personally resonates with you. The stories captured here are about you and your fellow team members, told in your individual voices. We have also continued to invest in Business Partnering Groups, 2 including charting a course into the future to ensure that team members can continue to rely on BPGs as a channel for personal and professional growth. I invite you to take the time to reflect on the incredible work we have accomplished together in the past year. We are even more excited about the opportunities that lie ahead! Buckle up, because I have a feeling will take us on another amazing ride. My sincere thanks for a great Toyota Financial Services TFS , as an integral part of the Toyota family, honors this commitment by operating with core values that guide our everyday activities, decisions, and way of thinking: We are operating around this idea of social innovation, which brings together diverse perspectives of internal team members in partnership with external stakeholders to generate ideas that solve social challenges and add value to Toyota. Always Better Service, which is a call-to-action for each team member to always enhance the services we provide. But as a leader in the financial services industry, it is incumbent upon us to align our business success with responsible practices. During this time of transition at Toyota, and as TFS begins its Next Chapter, now is the time to embrace change and look toward an exciting future that we all can influence. Today, there are more robust conversations; in fact, different perspectives now are actively being sought out and considered. I think that shift, along with this move, has really stretched the thinking for this organization. TFS strategically incorporates many ongoing initiatives for team members to encourage and promote innovation. Times of transition can be a challenge to resiliency. To help navigate this change, in TFS partnered with UCLA Professor Iris Firstenberg, a renowned leadership, creativity and innovation consultant, to conduct an innovation and thought leadership session with executives. With no set agenda, Firstenberg facilitated the session to let conversations happen naturally, uncovering areas of concern. It was an incredibly powerful and holistic approach, which generated innovative thinking to help with the Next Chapter transition. Employees are consumers too and we have the ability to leverage an incredibly diverse member body to achieve certain company initiatives without having to stretch or use outside resources. The early movers were charged with building an immediate presence in the most critical parts of the business, including recruiting, infrastructure and communications. As we recruit talent with varying viewpoints, we will be creating a more dynamic team that represents the future for TFS. In fact, TFS Human Resources is working to enhance and expand existing workforce development programs. Programs that support the team member experience include: This comprehensive team member development initiative offers programs that facilitate multiple ways to learn through exposure, education and experience. Program topics include career development, developing others, and having difficult conversations, as well as more job-specific technical courses. Team members have opportunities to learn about the broader TFS organization, collaborate to learn from others and work with their managers to discover creative ways to learn from on-the-job experiences. TFS has a variety of mentoring initiatives to boost team member engagement, collaboration and professional development. Mentor

Scout is an online tool team members can use to match mentees and mentors. In addition, numerous leadership programs help build networks across different functional areas to give team members opportunities to expand their knowledge outside of daily responsibilities, while they learn from different leadership styles. TFS Real Estate and Facilities and Business Technology Solutions also support collaboration and innovation by providing physical workspaces and equipment to accommodate the working, learning and communication styles of team members. These local and national relationships enhance our recruiting initiatives by reaching out to populations with specific talent, skill sets and unique perspectives. I was one of a small percentage of college students I know that secured a job after graduation. The success of individuals, teams and organizations depends on people communicating effectively and working harmoniously with colleagues and customers who have different backgrounds and perspectives. Cultural fluency is about understanding who you are first, why you think the way you do, where your personal perspective comes from and understanding its value. The second part of the equation is truly understanding that not everyone sees the world through the same lens. Another aspect of the training provided tools for having more meaningful and productive dialogue when those differences are taken into account. Understanding who you are is the first step. I continue to learn about my own biases and how it can affect how and what I hear. The curriculum focused on helping team members understand the dynamics in the workplace and how those dynamics impact business objectives. The course was designed to help team members better manage change within the context of diversity and inclusion, and as it relates to the various changes occurring as part of the Next Chapter. The education helps team members understand the impact of cultural attributes on individual behaviors, as well as potential reactions to change and cultural differences. The education connects to the TFS enterprise-wide focus of creating a culture in which everyone can realize their full potential and do their best work. The planning team consists of women across North America, which fosters collaboration across boundaries and promotes the development of a One Toyota perspective. As voluntary, employee-led groups that serve as a resource for members, the company is fostering a diverse, inclusive workplace aligned with organizational mission, values, goals, business practices and objectives. Other benefits include the development of future leaders, increased employee engagement and expanded marketplace reach. Toyota has nine BPGs that come together based on shared common interests with the sole purpose of advancing business objectives in creative and innovative ways. AAC is committed to community outreach partners, and provides members with the knowledge and skills to position them for growth opportunities. The group is committed to achieving professional development, strengthening business partnerships and improving business results through skills, talents and passions. TODOS is committed to providing team member development, business support, and community outreach. ToyotAbility is a unique group that provides team members with opportunities to include people and families with physical, non-visible, temporary and permanent disabilities. TERRA also provides a foundation for team members to develop their leadership by creating and launching new sustainability and awareness programs. ToyoPets members have an exciting opportunity to help drive business ideas to reach petfriendly consumers, as well as take part in volunteer opportunities. The BPG team also is working to synthesize data compiled from the summit to develop an integration plan that will be shared with stakeholders in the coming months. To ensure we come together as one BPG, we are now blending all chapters to share best practices and create a common vision. This aligns with the One Toyota vision to break through walls within the organization and create an atmosphere of cohesiveness. TFS is committed to increasing relationships with a supplier base that mirrors our customer population. TFS promotes a strong foundation of highly qualified, minority- and women-owned suppliers that are committed to delivering exceptional products and services. Five women-owned suppliers that are poised for growth into corporate engagements, and with no existing business relationship with TFS, were selected to participate. They were paired up with TFS senior leaders from crossfunctional areas to impart guidance, expertise and knowledge. Being able to positively influence others through the Carson High School mentoring program provides me with a sense of fulfillment and joy. We nurture partnerships that help support our community outreach and enable our giving to go further. In , more than 1, team members logged approximately 31, volunteer hours. A total of 65 team members received the U. Air Force, followed by a career in politics and academia. Fewer than half of states provide financial education
