First Baptist Church of Chattanooga Tennessee. A place to be. A place to serve.

Second vice president Brian Carmichael was not available. Baptist and Reflector photo David Leavell, pastor of First Baptist Church in Millington in West Tennessee, was elected president during the meeting, which drew messengers from churches. The total did not include eight messengers from First Baptist Church in Jefferson City, as the convention voted overwhelmingly not to seat those from the church, which called a woman as senior pastor earlier this year. See Baptist Press story on Tuesday, Nov. Among other actions, messengers also adopted a reduced budget from last year and referred a motion to expand the definition of a cooperating Tennessee Baptist church back to the Tennessee Baptist Mission Board. The annual meeting also focused on spiritual lostness in the state as reflected in the convention theme, "Rescue Now. Citing numerous verses of Scripture, the resolution noted that people are created in the image of God Genesis 1: The resolution noted that: And the resolution called for Tennessee Baptists "to earnestly pray, both for those who advocate racist ideologies and those who are thereby deceived, that they may see their error through the light of the gospel, repent of these hatreds, and come to know the peace and love of Christ through the redeemed fellowship in the kingdom of God, which is established from every nation, tribe, people, and language. Leavell II, served as president from Also elected as officers were Todd Stinnett, vice president, and Brian Carmichael, second vice president. It continues to move toward an equal distribution between TBC and Southern Baptist Convention causes but is a smaller step than originally planned due to a decline in Cooperative Program giving following an increase the previous year. The adopted budget will be distributed Messengers were to have considered a recommendation from the Tennessee Baptist Mission Board to expand the definition of a cooperating Baptist church to include those churches that give through the TBC portion of the Cooperative Program budget without restriction or designation. The recommendation noted that "some churches across the state have expressed frustration with actions and activities occurring on the SBC level. Some of them wish to direct funds around those entities but want to continue to fully support the activities at the TBC level. Failure to contribute to the Cooperative Program without any restriction has prohibited churches from sending messengers to the annual meeting. He acknowledged that he had just rotated off the TBMB and had approved the recommendation earlier this year. I think it needs more study. Steve Tiebout, pastor of The River Church in Cookeville, said it would be best to send the recommendation back for further study in order to develop a better plan. It goes against the fourth objective, he said, noting the recommendation has "some elements we need," but not all. Bill Seale, a messenger from First Baptist Church in Morristown, spoke against the referral, noting that it would have to be discussed again next year anyway because it takes two votes to change the constitution. After others expressed opinions, messengers voted overwhelmingly to refer the recommendation back to the TBMB for further study. Messengers also recognized the ending of a missions partnership in Italy and signed a partnership agreement with Nashville Baptist Association for City Reach Nashville. The meeting will be Nov. The dates of the th annual meeting set for Nov.

Greg became the President of the Tennessee Baptist Children's Homes on January 1st, after serving for 25 years as a pastor in Tennessee. He was the Senior Pastor of the First Baptist Church in Portland for 16 years prior to transitioning to TBCH in

All Southern Baptist women who share the views represented in the letter have been invited to sign it. Similar conversations regarding these same concerns have been happening among Southern Baptist men, pastors, elder boards, and leadership teams. We are likewise grieved by the commentsâ€™ heartbroken over the effect they have on our sisters in the faith, concerned about the wrong message they send to the world about the value and dignity of women, and aggrieved by the poor gospel witness. These concerns with Dr. We wish to stand with and support these sisters, adding our voices to theirs. We should have noticed this long ago, and we were at fault for ignoring it until our sisters pointed it out. Our choice to speak now is also an acknowledgment that we did not take enough care to notice and act when our fellow believers were being denigrated. They speak on their own with the authority and dignity of believers in Christ, created in the image of God. We understand that private appeals have been issued to the SWBTS trustees pleading with them to take decisive action. Given the public nature of Dr. All Southern Baptist men who share the views represented in the letter are invited to demonstrate that conviction by signing the letter to SWBTS trustees as follows: We have read and support the May 6 letter published by concerned Southern Baptist women. We affirm the courageous and biblical stance taken by the women who drafted that letter and by those who signed it. We weep with sisters whose concerns for safety may prevent them from adding their names in such a public format. We join our voices with theirs in urging you to exercise the authority you have been given by the churches of the Southern Baptist Convention and to take a strong stand against unbiblical teaching regarding womanhood, sexuality, and domestic violence. We are aggrieved by Dr. These comments and his decision to share them give the watching world cause to question Dr. Were the principal of a public high school to make such remarks about a teenaged girl in a public presentation, we can reasonably assume that he would immediately be called to meet with the school board and be reprimanded for his remarks and may even face termination of employment. Patterson suggests that the unbelieving community takes a stronger stand on the public treatment of women than Christians. His failure to repudiate these remarks, along with the silence of the SWBTS Board of Trustees, gives the impression that such counsel is appropriate, wise, and biblical. We declare it is not. In his recent remarks of clarification, Dr. Patterson has failed to repudiate and repent of his dangerous counsel and his inappropriate speech regarding a teenaged girl. As our sisters suggested, the watching world is asking if Southern Baptist men believe it is biblical to view and speak of sixteen-year-old girls as sexual objects. They wonder if abused women will be counseled according to the pattern of Dr. Far worse, they wonder if such views and counsel reflect the God of the Bible and our Lord Jesus Christ. We join our sisters in declaring that Jesus is nothing like this. His continued leadershipâ€™ without repentance and reprimandâ€™ calls into question the witness of the Southern Baptist Convention. The world is watching, brothers. We pray the Lord will grant you faith, courage, and wisdom to act in a way that represents well our Savior Jesus Christ and the Good News of his Kingdom.

This is especially true of a church, for a church is a body of believers, the body of Christ. The year was , a time of change. White settlers came to claim the lands vacated by the Cherokees, among these were a handful of Baptists, including Matthew Hillsman. He began preaching in the vicinity of Fourth and Fifth Streets near Georgia Avenue in a log schoolhouse, a building chinked with mud. Built around , it had benches with no backs and the floor was the bottom of an old abandoned flat boat. It was jointly used by all denominations on a rotating schedule. Through his efforts, this group of Baptists were organized into a mission of the First Baptist Church of Nashville, Tennessee, in May . The town commissioners granted the group a plot of land on the corner of Lookout and Sixth Streets present site of the Hamilton County Courthouse , but it was a decade before they were able to erect their first building. That same year they began the first building, and it was dedicated in . It was also in that one of its most illustrious laymen, Foley Vaughn, became a member of the church. Hillsman had departed in to become the first president of Mossy Creek Academy, forerunner of Carson-Newman College. The church had several pastors during the two decades preceding the Civil War, most of them staying only a short time and then moving on to the West. In September, , the church was occupied by the Union Army as a hospital for Federal troops and subsequently as a Chapel. This almost dealt the church a death blow because the building was left in ruins and most of the congregation was scattered to other places. It was due to the perseverance and dedication of one man, Foley Vaughn, that the blow was not mortal. He held prayer meetings in his home, mortgaged his own property to have the church repaired, and secured a minister, acting as custodian himself. Faithfully, every Sunday, Mr. Vaughn rang the church bell to call people to worship. The first post-bellum minister was Rev. Wambolt, eloquent and persuasive, became pastor and crowds flocked to hear him, so much so that the building was bursting at its seams. It was enlarged and several months later the congregation purchased a new site at the corner of Georgia Avenue and Oak Street. During the pastorate of Rev. Willingham, later to become Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, a new building was erected, made of Sewanee sandstone. At this time membership had grown to . In the sanctuary was severely damaged by fire, but was rebuilt the same year. During the years around the turn of the century, the church was experiencing steady growth. Four sessions of the Southern Baptist Convention were held in the church in , , and . Inzer began his ten-year ministry in and under his leadership the church experienced its greatest growth, the Church School averaging 1, a week in attendance. The educational facilities were enlarged in and a new educational building was erected in . Huff became pastor, and it was under his ministry that the large indebtedness, resulting from the expansion program of which had immediately preceded the nationwide depression was retired. Under his tenure much remodeling was done within the buildings, and there was a great increase in gifts. The church had always been mission-minded, beginning with the establishment of two missions which became the Ridgedale Baptist Church and the East Lake Baptist Church, and during Dr. In March, , Dr. Luther Joe Thompson became pastor of the church. He led the congregation in purchasing the site in the Golden Gateway and in the construction of our third building, October 29, . At the opening of each service in the Sanctuary, worshippers hear the lovely tones of an historic bronze bell, hanging high in the bell tower of the building. This bell is the same one which hung in the tower of the first building of First Baptist Church. During the Civil War it was painted black and hidden to discourage it being melted down for scrap metal. For several decades it was used by a sister church, but was re-acquired and restored to its place of honor when these new buildings were constructed. Of additional historical significance is the three-piece silver communion service which graces the communion table in the Sanctuary just in front of the pulpit. Eugene Spears was pastor of First Baptist from . A native of South Carolina, Dr. Spears was a graduate of the University of South Carolina and earned his B. He was one of the youngest men to earn a Ph. D in Theology at the University of Edinburgh. McEwen, a native of Charleston, South Carolina, was called as pastor on December 9, , after he had served as interim pastor for several months.

Although a longtime minister and former pastor of several Baptist churches, Dr. McEwen, for a number of years, had been involved in educational affairs serving on the faculty of the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga. In , the Fellowship Hall was remodeled, doubling the dining capacity and providing additional classroom and meeting room space. At the same time, the breezeway connecting the Sanctuary to the education and office area was enclosed. On November 25, , a dedication service was held for a new chapel later named the McEwen Chapel and education complex. Peter McLeod became our pastor in , coming from a church in Waco, Texas. He had emigrated as a young man from Scotland to study engineering. During his ministry in Chattanooga, Rev. McLeod visited every member of the Home Bound Department on their birthday. The McLeods were interested in television and radio ministry and left Chattanooga to pursue a call to the First Baptist Church in Hattiesburg, Mississippi. He was a graduate of Centenary College Shreveport, Louisiana , where he was a varsity baseball player and graduated with honors in . He entered New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary in and earned the Bachelor of Divinity degree with the highest possible academic average and later the Doctor of Theology degree, majoring in theology and the philosophy of religion. He was the author of three books, including The Dynamics of Belief. Harbuck served this church admirably, but for a brief time. He was forced to resign as pastor due to illness and became Pastor Emeritus upon his retirement. He died of a brain tumor on June 4, . Carver served longer than any other pastor in the history of First Baptist. He retired December 21, after twenty-three years of service. He is active in Chattanooga Rotary. In , First Baptist started a contemporary worship service named Connections. With both a contemporary and a traditional service, First Baptist Church continues to emphasize a diverse yet inclusive congregation, different worship styles, a dedication to mission efforts here in Chattanooga and around the World, a strong educational program for all ages, and an unending investment in the downtown community with involvement in over 25 local service ministries. Throughout her long history, First Baptist Church has had a strong commitment to proclaiming the word of God and in "making more disciples and better disciples of Jesus Christ.
