"Undocumented and Unafraid" may have read the sign Ricardo Lujan carried in downtown Ashland at the Women's March, but it doesn't discount his deep concerns that he could be deported at any time.

It has been suggested that this article be split into multiple articles. These asylum seekers were arriving from countries in Central America like El Salvador and Guatemala that were politically unstable. More than 75, Salvadoreans and , Guatemalans were killed by their governments in hopes to suppress the communist movement in those countries at the time. The resolution was followed the same year by an ordinance which prohibited the use of city funds and resources to assist federal immigration enforcement—the defining characteristic of a sanctuary city in the U. Several different terms and phrases are used to describe immigrants who enter the U. Acceptable variations include living in or entering a country illegally or without legal permission. Colorado Congressman Tom Tancredo ran on an anti-illegal immigration platform and specifically attacked sanctuary cities. I have absolutely no support for a city that ignores the strong evidence that should be acted on. The Justice Department called the laws unconstitutional and asked a judge to block them. The list included funding a wall along the U. President Trump issued an executive order which declared that jurisdictions that "refuse to comply" with 8 U. Other states and cities have responded by not cooperating with federal immigration efforts or showcasing welcoming policies towards immigrants. Minor crimes, such as shoplifting, became grounds for possible deportation. However, it provides no general power for immigration enforcement by state and local authorities. Congressman Tom Tancredo R-Colo. The amendment would have to pass the United States Senate to become effective. Brian Bilbray , R-Calif. The legislation would make undocumented immigrant status a felony , instead of a civil offense. Also, the bill targets sanctuary cities by withholding up to 50 percent of Department of Homeland Security funds from the cities. I intend to take as vigorous legal action as the law allows to prevent that from happening, prevent that kind of interference. The circumvention of Congress makes the order a threat to separation of powers, as well. District Judge William Orrick issued a nationwide preliminary injunction halting this executive order. Constitution does not provide a clear answer. Both federal and local government offer arguments to defend their authority. Because the Supremacy Clause is generally interpreted to mean that federal law takes priority over state law, the U. Supreme Court in the majority of cases has ruled in favor of the federal government. Certain states have been affected by illegal immigration more than others and have attempted to pass legislation that limits access by undocumented immigrants to public benefits. Crime[ edit ] A review study of the existing literature noted that the existing studies had found that sanctuary cities either have no impact on crime or that they lower the crime rate. Wong, associate professor of political science at the University of California, San Diego , published by the Center for American Progress , a progressive think tank: Moreover, economies are stronger in sanctuary counties — from higher median household income, less poverty, and less reliance on public assistance to higher labor force participation, higher employment-to-population ratios, and lower unemployment. Bell , the mayor of Birmingham , declared the city a "welcoming city" and said that the police would not be "an enforcement arm of the federal government" with respect to federal immigration law. He also stated that the city would not require proof of citizenship for granting business licenses. The Birmingham City Council subsequently passed a resolution supporting Birmingham being a "sanctuary city". Immigration and Customs Enforcement. Many Californian cities have adopted "sanctuary" ordinances banning city employees and public safety personnel from asking people about their immigration status. The Orange County city is the first to successfully challenge SB The law declared local authorities could not hold immigrants for immigration officials if they had no violent felonies on their records and did not currently face charges. It does not bar local and state agencies from cooperating with ICE regarding certain illegal criminals and ICE can carry out raids targeting undocumented immigrants within the state. Denver does not identify as a sanctuary city. The Denver Post reports: Elm City Resident Card Hartford passed an ordinance providing services to all residents regardless of their immigration in Said ordinance also prohibits that police from detaining individuals based solely on their immigration status or inquiring as to their immigration status. In , the ordinance was amended to declare that Hartford is a "Sanctuary City", though the term itself does not have an established legal meaning. Republican Mayor Carlos Gimenez ordered jails to "fully cooperate" with Presidential immigration policy. He said he did not want to risk losing a larger amount of federal financial aid for not complying. The mayor said Miami-Dade County has never considered itself to be a sanctuary city. Petersburg Democratic Mayor Rick Kriseman said residents from all backgrounds implored him to declare a sanctuary city. In February he blogged that, "I have no hesitation in declaring St. Petersburg a sanctuary from harmful federal immigration laws. We will not expend resources to help enforce such laws, nor will our police officers stop, question or arrest an individual solely on the basis that they may have unlawfully entered the United States. The mayor criticized President Trump for "demonization of Muslims. However, the Illinois associations for Sheriffs and Police Chiefs stated that the bill does not prevent cooperation with the federal government or give sanctuary for illegal immigrants. Both organizations support the bill. Kalamazoo re-affirmed its status as a sanctuary city in Vice Mayor Don Cooney stated, "We care about you. We will protect you. We are with you. An order by mayor Virg Bernero still prohibits Lansing police officers from asking residents about their immigration status, however. The Homeland Security has the legal authority to enforce immigration laws in the United States, in Minnesota and in the city.

Congreso de Jornaleros I live seven blocks from the Canal streetcar. On my walk over I pass an old brick church, one of scores of sanctuaries in the city. First Grace United Methodist Church has one thing on all the others, though. Jose is a community leader with the Congress of Day Laborers Congreso de Jornaleros , a group of immigrant workers and families who helped to rebuild the city after Hurricane Katrina. In November of , Jose became the first New Orleanian to take sanctuary in a church to avoid deportation. So Rachel Taber translated for me. As Jose began to tell his story, his eyes softened, and I could tell that this is a story many years in the making. Jose was eighteen years old when he arrived in the US. He emigrated to escape the violence that continues to ravage his home country. Faced with the constant threat of human trafficking and homicide, Jose made a choice. Jose Torres and family photo credit: Congreso de Jornaleros Though that memory remains vivid, much has changed for Jose since he became a New Orleanian. He has a family now â€” two daughters, both of whom have serious health issues. His youngest daughter is two years old and was born prematurely, which has led to a complicated seizure condition. To keep going, no matter what it takes, to make sure your family is moving forward and doing well and is provided for. Ever since then, Jose has been part of a larger struggle that many New Orleanians share â€” the right to live here. At this time, they have not granted him a stay, meaning that he must remain in the limbo of sanctuary. I have hope that someday I will return to my family. For him, the struggle for freedom transcends borders. I think that our society has lost sight of that. We need to focus on this fight that we all share. You can hear the full minute interview between Sarah Holtz and Jose Torres below:

One year ago today, year-old Alex Garcia moved out of his Poplar Bluff home for what he hoped would be a brief absence. He was under orders from U. Immigration and Customs Enforcement to report for deportation to his native Honduras. Instead, he took sanctuary and has spent the past twelve months living in Christ Church in Maplewood. As we wrote back then, hundreds of people in conservative Poplar Bluff have signed petitions, vouching for his character and asking ICE to allow him to stay. So far, ICE has refused. Garcia has lived in Missouri for fourteen years. He has five kids and a wife who are all American citizens. In and , he was granted temporary stays of deportation that allowed him to remain legally in the country. But then Donald Trump was elected president, promising to build a border wall and crack down on illegal immigration. That has left Garcia and his family in position of asking for mercy from an administration that has made a practice of locking children away from their parents for months in detention centers. Lacy Clay, who had previously visited Garcia and publicly supported him , was the only lawmaker to speak with them in person during the trip. She wanted them to see her and understand the effect that immigration policy is having on her family â€” her "American family," she emphasized in her meetings. Alex Garcia, a construction worker, helped get the family off public assistance after he and Carly got together a decade ago. If he was deported, he would have to spend ten years outside the country before he would be considered for re-entry. Carly Garcia says the family has struggled financially these past twelve months. A Blunt staffer promised to review additional information so she could make a recommendation to the senator about whether or not he should get involved. Asked if she is more or less hopeful than she was a year ago, Carly Garcia thinks for a long time before answering. They have more info on the Alex Belongs Here Facebook page. By Toni Peake President Donald Trump made it clear throughout his campaign that he had an issue with the number of undocumented people living in the United States. He also pledged to deport what the U. Department of Homeland Security estimates is Kate Drew of cnbc. Supporters of the border wall hope that this vetting process can be used to screen travelers and detect terrorism at a faster rate. Many undocumented college students feel they could potentially be at risk amid this debate; through protests and demonstrations, these students across the country have urged their universities to declare themselves a sanctuary. Opinions on sanctuary campuses vary. Republican politicians like Texas Governor Greg Abbott are questioning the validity of the label itself. What exactly is a SanctuaryCampus? The legal backing regarding sanctuary campuses has been controversial. The term sanctuary campus started primarily on the West Coast, mostly in California, where sanctuary cities became a localized issue. USA Today College , which focuses on campus issues, says there are people who see a sanctuary campus as an institution that vows to protect its undocumented students from all proposed federal deportation standards. Others see sanctuaries as safe zones for people of various nationalities to come and learn without fear of discrimination. University of Texas Rio Grande Valley students protest for sanctuary campuses. He said that universities can demand a warrant from immigration officials before they are able to access campus. Other steps can include assisting undocumented students with the U. That way, students can avoid the conflicts with being undocumented all together. A university can also put policies in place that allow students to chose whether or not they disclose their citizenship status. Whether or not universities choose to adopt the title of a sanctuary campus, institutions have to be prepared for what might happen when they accept an undocumented student. Sanctuary campuses are seen by some as a beacon of hope. Atef Hassan Shaheen, whose family relocated from Syria to Turkey because of terrorism, is a graduate student at the Koc University in Istanbul, Turkey. Once he heard what the term sanctuary campus means, he was pleased. Confusion, resistance and opposition â€ why? There is no uniform legal language to support sanctuary campuses, and some states, like Indiana, fear that the designation can actually do more harm than good. Rutgers Universityâ€Newark hosts walkout in hopes of their campus being declared a sanctuary. The Associated Press reported that the Senate passed the bill , and awaits further voting by the government. Legislation in states like Georgia are threatening to cut federal funding to universities that declare themselves a sanctuary. After Emory College announced that it, too, would take on a sanctuary status, state government officials decided that it was time to take a stance. That also is not the case. Fischer said that more private institutions are embracing the title than public schools are, as public schools worry over funding. This is because state universities and colleges depend more on taxpayer dollars to keep their institutions going, whereas private institutions can rely more on higher tuition rates and personal donations. Taylor Dumpson, the newly elected student government president at American University in Washington, D. Dumpson said AU should use the resources already in place to work with students to ensure that they feel safe. What schools have declared? Yahoo News says that, as of now, there are about 30 campuses that have officially declared themselves a sanctuary, some of which include: Portland State University public.

Let me begin with a story. Once upon a time, There were 4 young seedlings and each was unique. At an experiment, they were separated into 2 groups of 2. The first pair was sent into the deepest ends of the jungle and the second pair was sent into the botanical gardens in Singapore. The first pair had to fight the other seeds and trees for sun, water and all that is needed for a plant to grow. The second pair had the measured amounts of sun, water and minerals given to them instead. From the first pair, the First Seed grew humble, strong and majestic tree standing tall for all to see. The Second Seed however, reached similar heights by climbing over and blocking sun and water of others. He died long before the First Seed. From the second pair, the Third Seed became a rare species. Groomed by the botanist of the garden, he reached his peak of his growth. Standing tall, bearing much fruit, breaking new grounds. The Fourth Seed however, did not get that same result. With the same conditions as the Third Seed, he grew lazy with the treatment. He took the sun, water and minerals for granted. He did not strive to grow and ended up a "Failure". In the end, he was given up upon and was cut away. This is the story of the Four Seeds. There are many many teenagers out there who are managing and coping with life to the best they can. However, there are also many many teenagers out there crying for a way out. I am 18 years old and I am one of them. Maybe you are too. The teen world is unique in its nature. It is a place of transition and has its own rules, traditions, values, music, slang, style and so on. In every school, clique and group, exists a distinct culture which makes the group different from others. This is the teen world we all know. One teenager quoted: The crazy world of one-upmanship is so validated on TV; there is the sense that this is the way it should be. The world is built on this one-up, one-down idea. Only recently, I wanted to initiate an idea and my friends told me it was "crap". And that it should be done "this way" instead. I also wanted to take up a certain course but my father was against it. Do any of these sound familiar at one point? Then you are not alone. In the end, teenagers are humans. Teenagers are the result of children growing up. Teenagers represent what adults long to return to and want to treasure. Teenagers need Motivation and Confidence to grow into the "successful" adult that all adults around us want us to be. Motivation and Confidence is however a very sacred resource and most adults use these as tools of reward. If you have come home early on time without breaking curfew, does your parents acknowledge your behaviour? What if the opposite happens? It is such a wonder to adults how "kids these days" can go astray and participate in undesirable activities. But with the little support given by these adults, I wonder why they think such. Ultimately it goes around in a circle. Motivation is like water and Confidence is like sun. If we are to see the fruits of our little Seeds, we need to water and sun the plant daily and carefully. Too much Motivation may result in sounding too naggy and will drown the plant. Too much Confidence may result in a proud behaviour of conceit. Both these results are negative. But the risk of it happening is forever present. If water is not given and not present daily, it may affect the growth of the plant. Same with the sun. Motivation and Confidence must be given in moderation regularly. The key words are "moderation" and "regularly". Hard for adults to do? That's why there are so little botanists out there. Necessary for adults to do? That's why raising a child is the toughest, hardest and longest project for a parent to undertake. As teenagers, we too have to play our part. We have to strive for Sun and Water or we will not get any of it. The process of striving is the process of growing and learning. If we keep at it, like the First Seed, we will grow and reach our dreams. The teenage world is not so complicated after all. It is up to us to make them understand not the other way round. Therefore I encourage you out there. Be whatever troubles you're facing. Be whatever downfalls you meet. Be whatever relations you struggle with. Be whatever confidence lost. Be whatever motivation drained. Be whatever others said and did to you. YOU are the one who can stand up and be counted. YOU are the one who can decide to change. YOU are the one who can make that difference. Remember the best way to Change those around you is to Change yourself. You are NOT alone. You never will be alone. So stand up and keep your chin up as you fight the world. Soon others will be fighting you as you grow older. I told a friend, "But that's life. Because if you do this, you will feel a whole lot better inside."
