Under the Blood Red Sun: The Human Scale of War I was one of the lucky thousand Honoluluans and visitors who sat under the stars at Pearl Harbor one night this summer and watched this grand movie unfurl.

Fortunate kids learn this truth early on — from a parent, a mentor, a committed teacher, a friend. But not all are so fortunate as to have such guides. This is where stories can make a real difference. Kids have been writing to author Graham Salisbury for the last twenty years about his book, Under the Blood-Red Sun-- are the characters real? Did you ever have a best friend like Billy? When is it going to be a movie? We are excited to finally announce that a live-action feature film of Under the Blood-Red Sun has been in development for some time. It captures the essence of the book and adds several new scenes to bring the story to life like never before. All of the pieces to make this film are coming together, including an amazingly talented cast, a crew that can do anything, incredible locations, authentic period wardrobe, and much of the funding. Our Kickstarter goal represents the final push we need to be able to start shooting this November. As Tomi looks up at the sky and recognizes the Blood-Red Sun emblem on the amber fighter planes, he knows that his life has changed forever. His father and grandfather, both Japanese Americans, are quickly arrested and taken to internment camps. His mother loses her job just because she is Japanese. With the absence of his father, Tomi must quickly learn to provide for his family while also dealing with the increased scrutiny he and his family receive simply due to the color of their skin. Tim has directed over TV commercials, received at least 12 awards, 1 wife, 2 kids, 2 yappy dogs, and a genuinely great guy with a bazillion friends - everyone knows Tim. She is married to 1 retired USN submarine captain husband, has twin 23 year-old redheaded daughters, and is great at multitasking and carrying on two conversations at once. We have a great cast, terrific locations, MacGyver-trained crew, period props real baseball gloves from the s - phew! What we need hint: Your contribution will go toward paying our talented actors and seasoned crew of MacGuyver-trained pros, location fees, and for renting period vehicles, props, and wardrobe. Graham, Dana, and Tim have deferred all fees and expenses so that every pledge goes directly to making the film. Your support will bring a unique character-driven story that is perfect for the entire family with strong values and colorful characters to life. Tolerance is a way of thinking and feeling — but most importantly, of acting — that gives us peace in our individuality, respect for those unlike us, the wisdom to discern humane values, and the courage to act upon them. Many thanks and much aloha for joining us on this journey, -- Graham, Tim and Dana Join us on Facebook and Twitter to learn more about Under the Blood-Red Sun and for exclusive information and updates! Regarding reward fulfillment to backers, we have already set up an infrastructure for handling fulfillment, including making arrangements with suppliers to accommodate the production and distribution of rewards to backers in a timely manner. At the end of the day though, we are so passionate about Under the Blood-Red Sun that we will plow through any obstacles that threaten to keep us from bringing this powerful story to you, our wonderful fans. Questions about this project? For being our first backers, you get access to exclusive video updates from the set every day during filming in addition to the advanced HD digital download of the film.

Under the Blood-Red Sun provides a riveting view of what Japanese Americans endured at the time of the bombing of Pearl Harbor. Loyalties were tested to the extreme as military and volunteer brigades strung barbed wire around the schools and excavated bomb shelters in public parks.

The synopsis below may give away important plot points. For thirteen-year-old Tomi Kyler Ki Sakamoto his world is idyllic, revolving around his close-knit family: His best friend is Billy Kalama Epstein. Both Tomi and Billy are the targets of bullying by mean-tempered Keet Bryce Moore, who is older and carries a. There is little Tomi can do against Keet due to circumstance: All Japanese people in Hawaii become suspect. Papa is arrested, his boat sunk. Keet had told the authorities of the birds, saying they could be carrying messages to the enemy. Later, the family hides all their possessions that are Japanese. Grampa takes his katana, a Samurai sword sacred to the Nakaji family, and hides it deep in the jungle. Tomi begins to experience prejudice from people who now look at his family differently, thinking they may have played a part in the Pearl Harbor attack. He is afraid that Billy will no longer be his friend, but Billy sticks by him. Tomi risks his life, undertaking a dangerous swim to the island, to see his father. In a brief, secret visit, Papa tells Tomi to reassure Mama it will be okay. Then, Grampa is arrested. As he is being taken away, he tells Tomi to protect the katana. Family friend Charlie Wil Kahele is able to show Tomi where it is hidden, but when Tomi recovers the sword, he is caught by Keet, who tries to take it away at gunpoint. Wilson Lisa Barnes, who provides help, by informing Tomi and his mother that Papa will soon be shipped off to an internment camp on the mainland. He and Mama decide they must try to see Papa. On the day that he is to depart, crowds have gathered downtown. Tomi sees Papa amongst prisoners being marched towards the harbor. Papa reassures Tomi that he will find a way back home, but until then, Tomi needs to look after the family.

Goodreads Tomi was born in Hawaii. His grandfather and parents were born in Japan, and came to America to escape poverty. World War II seems far away from Tomi and his friends, who are too busy playing ball on their eighth-grade team, the Rats. The reason being the book cover. I love how this cover is put together and feels kind of retro. There is sort of a sense of urgency with the cover and the red is just so eye-catching. So, being the shallow magpie that I am, I put Under The Blood-Red Sun on my iPhone and let it sit until something a bit more pressing besides the book cover had me ready to listen to it. I found myself really in the mood for a historical fiction read, and because I like to hop genres with audiobooks meaning that unless I am listening to a series, I prefer the books I listen to have variety. And well, here we are. Tomi is a kid who was born in Hawaii, however, his parents are Japanese and have immigrated to Hawaii. Typically, Tomi is proud of his family and his heritage. However, as this book opens, there are tensions going on because of World War II, culminating in a bombing of Pearl Harbor, near where Tomi lives. Due to his ethnic background, Tomi experiences negative repercussions because of this. Also, his grandfather is still loyal to the Empire, kind of. I mean, he finds family honor and loyalty to be very important. This puts his grandfather at risk and the family in a tough situation. So, anyways, this is a book about a Japanese American boy living in Hawaii during the Pearl Harbor bombing and just beginning to experience internment via his father and grandfather. Oh, and there is also a great deal of baseball involved in this story. I mean, I probably will not listen to the sequels because this book did not wow me. I thought the subject matter was fascinating. I felt empathy for Tomi and his situation. He straddles the line between wanting to be a good American but also loving his family and his heritage. Further, he experiences racism and xenophobia, almost, from his neighbors. I can see the parallel today for certain. Furthermore, I felt like this book while interesting never made me want to listen during a time that I was not driving or cleaning or showering. I just never got fully into it. He adds a bit of action and some up and down dynamic to his voice. However, I will admit to finding my attention wandering while listening to this audiobook.
