Introduction: Understanding U.S. Citizenship, U.S. Nationality, and Nationality without Citizenship Under the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), it is impossible to be a U.S. citizen without being a U.S. national.

Between and only 63 people had their citizenship revoked. The 1, individuals were identified following a three-year investigation by the RCMP, other police forces and Citizenship and Immigration Canada. On September 9, , Minister Kenney announced that the number of people who would likely have their citizenship revoked had risen to 3,, with an additional 11, people under investigation. The potential citizenship revocation of 11, Canadians generated considerable media and political attention, including this Twitter exchange between Jason Kenney and Jinny Sims , the New Democratic Party Immigration Critic. Order in cases of fraud Revocation by Minister “ fraud, false representation, etc. Revocation for fraud “ declaration of Court Some individuals think that they can misrepresent their way to permanent residency, tell the truth when applying for citizenship, obtain citizenship, and then never have to worry about the consequences of the misrepresentations that led to them obtaining permanent residence. The test for establishing fraud under s. The Government of Canada does not have to prove that had an individual been truthful during the application process then his citizenship application would have been rejected. In assessing the materiality of the information concealed, regard is held to the significance of the undisclosed information. Furthermore, innocent misrepresentations will not result in the revocation of citizenship unlike in permanent residency, a hotly contested area. Notice to person in respect of revocation Obodzinsky, it is to engage in an investigative proceeding to collect evidence of facts surrounding the acquisition of citizenship, so as to determine whether it was obtained by fraudulent means. Rogan had either engaged in or was complicit in war crimes, and, if so, whether or not he misrepresented this information when he immigrated to Canada. The determination of whether the misrepresentation and fraud should lead to the revocation of citizenship remained with the Government of Canada. The same will be true for individuals involved in the current investigation. The Federal Court will not state whether the Government of Canada should revoke the citizenship of someone encompassed by s. It will simply determine whether there was fraud. The revocation of Canadian citizenship does not lead to automatic deportation. It does not specifically jeopardize the right of the person to remain in Canada.

Understanding Citizenship By KrisAnne Hall 20 Comments Our Founders established the criteria of Natural Born Citizen upon our President for a very important reason.

Natural Born Citizen meant, to our framers, a child born of two parents who were citizens of the United States at the time of the birth of that child. Someone cannot hold or have held dual citizenship with a foreign country and be a Natural Born Citizen. The fact that we are confused by this qualification, or perhaps even wish to alter this qualification, must be because we do not understand WHY this qualification was established in the first place. So, before we take a stand either way, we must consider the reasons why this qualification was established by the framers of the American Constitution. The whole reason the president must be a Natural Born Citizen is because our framers had a history full of foreign kings imposing foreign law and foreign favor upon the people and they knew how dangerous foreign influence was to Liberty. George Washington spent a great bit of effort trying to drive this understanding home in his Farewell Address of They indicated that these grievance were indicative of a larger design to overturn and undermine Liberty of the people and the Law of the Land. One of the grievances illustrates how foreign influence and foreign law have contributed to that destruction of Liberty: So help me God. At the time of the creation of the Constitution by the States there were no Natural Born Citizens so an exception was made until that qualification could be met. Article 2 section 1 clause 5 reads: It was doubtless introduced for it has now become by lapse of time merely nominal, and will soon become wholly extinct out of respect to those distinguished revolutionary patriots, who were born in a foreign land, and yet had entitled themselves to high honours in their adopted country. The President is the commander in chief of the military. Our framers knew from their history that it would be extremely dangerous to allow someone of foreign influence to exercise power over our military. The commander in chief must be loyal to the United States, first and only. When a child is raised in a home where one or both parents are citizens of a foreign country, then that child will naturally be raised with an attachment to that foreign country out of love for that parent. Our framers knew that in time of military crisis, our commander in chief must be free from all attachments and bias with a foreign country and mattered not if that bias was for or against the foreign country. The president must not hesitate or haste in matters of war. He must only act upon the best interest of the United States, free from internal conflict. George Washington explains this fact in his Farewell Address: He postulates why a foreign country might actually want to actually raise up someone to become president of the United States and the inherent danger in that possibility: These most deadly adversaries of republican government might naturally have been expected to make their approaches from more than one quarter, but chiefly from the desire in foreign powers to gain an improper ascendant in our councils. How could they better gratify this, than by raising a creature of their own to the chief magistracy of the Union? Throughout history citizenship has been based upon the criteria of the parents. It has not been linked to the child. This criteria of Natural Born Citizen does not deviate from that norm. In summary, the entire reason for establishing the criteria for a president to be a Natural Born Citizen was to help to eliminate any possibility that the commander in chief of the military be influenced by love or hate of a foreign nation. Because of this well established and historically justified reason, we should think very long and hard before we consider altering or diluting this established requirement through modern interpretation or modern court opinions. Our framers did what they did on purpose and with a purpose.

Furthermore, it is impossible for a noncitizen to apply for U. Therefore, under sections a 21 and 22 A , all U. It is impossible to have U. However, section a 22 B renders it possible to have U. In the next section, we will examine the situations in which a person can be a U. The rules for acquiring U. However, section of the same article of the CNMI Covenant allowed for any person who would have otherwise obtained citizenship under one of the three above provisions to, within six months of November 4, , or within six months after reaching 18 years of age whichever was later become a noncitizen national by making a declaration under oath before a U. Accordingly, any persons in CNMI who opted to become nationals under section are noncitizen nationals unless they subsequently acquired U. Under current law, they are the only other persons who can be noncitizen nationals of the United States besides those who become noncitizen nationals under the provisions of section of the INA. One may note that the text from section a 21 and a 22 B does not appear to necessarily preclude the possibility that there are other ways to obtain nationality but not citizenship. The holding of Morin was also disagreed with in Marquez-Almanzar v. Additionally, there are numerous other circuit court cases that reject proposed paths to obtaining noncitizen nationality that are not among those in section of the INA. Between the various circuit decisions and the Matter of Tuitasi, there is no way to obtain nationality without U.
