As always, this is only an excerpt with the full article and bibliography available online. He began collecting tobacco tin tags at age eight in and coins at thirteen in when living in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. In his lifetime of collecting his favorite pieces were store cards, tokens, medals and political pieces. He studied at Park Institute and Beaver College. His first ad in the September issue of The Numismatist, pages , was an announcement for his eight-page fixed priced list of ancient and medieval coins and served as a notice for his small display ad forthcoming in the November issue for Greek, Bactrian, Parthian, Egyptian, Roman, Byzantine, and medieval British and French coins. A similar but larger size ad appeared in the January issue on page He got his feet wet writing in The Numismatist in the February issue describing five medals in his collection and inquiring further information about the Palmetto "No submission" token. Wright replied in the April issue correcting him about the attribution, and also about the Pitt medal. In June of he lived at Sheridan Avenue, Pittsburg stamped on his aluminum store card, and on his printed business envelopes and this new address was published in the July issue of The Numismatist, and also appears on his new printed business envelopes that refer to his corporate name as Thomas L. Also, another envelope, Thomas L. He spent thirty-five years in New York before retiring to South Carolina. He was an active member of the ANS since January 18, Elder always seemed to show a dark side to his character which seemed to grow stronger from to , like a blister that swelled up and burst. Dave Bowers rightly called his writing "feisty and irreverent" in his seminal article in Rare Coin Review Winter Adams, "One might accuse Elder of being short-tempered, sharp-tongued or self-righteous but never dull or dishonest. In the , besides publishing his monthly periodical, fixed price coin lists, and other circulars, flyers and business letterheads, invoices, envelopes and post cards he ran The Elder Numismatic Press publishing numismatic literature including: All Dates and Varieties Described and Illustrated ; These were all die-hard numismatists and collectors each one a notable figure critical to the history of American numismatic history. From to Elder might have been instrumental in influencing the U. Weinman and Herman A. MacNeil in their new designs for the dime, quarter and half dollars, but this claim may very well be an exaggeration. But there were no takers and he was forced to close. He died, as John W. Adams has put it, "a sick and cynical old man" on May 11, , at Travelers Rest, South Carolina, about 9 miles north of Greenville. An obituary appeared in the June issue of Hobbies Magazine, on page His obituary did not appear in The Numismatist until July and with a scanty obituary notice. The career of Thomas L. Elder may rightly be described as coming in like a roaring lion and having gone out in a very faint whisper, or was it a whimper. Perhaps his best epitaph was written by John W. Adams, "He could cause the fur to fly but none could doubt his sincerity and, in the end, few can match the breadth of his contributions. The inventory left by Elder purportedly was taken over by his son-in-law, Paul S. Seitz , a bank bookkeeper, who traded out of Glen Rock, Pennsylvania, and in time became well-known as a respectable dealer. The earliest known marriage of Thomas L. Elder was in , five years after the birth of Ethel. Seitz was related to Elder through his mother Lydia May Seitz , and was not his son-in-law. To read the complete article, see:

Background[edit] The Spanish milled dollar was declared legal tender in the United States in The Coinage Act of , the legislation which provided for the establishment of the Mint of the United States today the United States Mint , authorized coinage of multiple denominations of gold, silver and copper coins. By , a majority of depositors requested their bullion be struck as silver dollars, which were then utilizing the Draped Bust design. In Consequence of a representation from the director of the Bank of the United States that considerable purchases have been made of dollars coined at the mint for the purpose of exporting them, and as it is probable further purchases and exportations will be made the President directs that all the silver to be coined at the mint shall be of small denominations, so that the value of the largest pieces shall not exceed half a dollar. You are requested, therefore, to forward to the Department for that purpose, duplicate specimens of each kind now in use, whether of gold, silver, or copper. He stated that one should be yellow in color, and the other crimson, and that funds could be drawn from the Treasury for the value of the boxes and coins. Said bin Sultan was the recipient of a coin set containing an dollar. Newman and Kenneth E. On June 30, Edmund P. Julian suggests that it could have been done to prevent angering collectors who would not have been able to acquire the dated coin for their collections; Chief Coiner Adam Eckfeldt , after consulting with Moore, mistakenly determined that 19, dollars bearing the date were struck in that year. The controversy prompted William E. DuBois , Mint Assayer, to try, in , to recall the examples of the dollar in private hands. Eckfeldt and William DuBois. Stickney, who acquired the coin from the Mint on May 9, , by trading certain rare coins from his collection, including a unique early United States Immune Columbia coin struck in gold. Woodward described the dollar as "the king of coins", a moniker which it maintains today. David Bowers asserts that the dollar has attracted more attention than any other coin. They are identified by nicknames based on prominent owners, or the first individuals known to have possessed the coins. Spink announced that he was in possession of a theretofore unknown dollar specimen. The set consisted of a half cent , cent , dime , quarter , half dollar , dollar, quarter eagle , half eagle and eagle. Early on, collectors assumed that the dollars were struck in , and their rarity was explained by various theories. The bulk of the mintage was variously rumored to have been paid to Barbary pirates as ransom, lost at sea en route to China, and melted before leaving the Philadelphia Mint. Elliot Woodward acknowledged that dollars were struck as diplomatic gifts in , but he also believed that others were struck in Low and William T. Marvin, writing for the American Journal of Numismatics in , stated that "the journal confidently asserts that there is no dollar dated which was struck in that year by the U. Nexsen wrote that the Class I dollars were "without doubt coined in ". Bolen, a medallist and coin collector who created copies of valuable coins between and , fabricated an dollar by altering the last digit in the date of a genuine example. In Saigon and other South Vietnamese cities, as well in nearby Thailand, military personnel were offered the copies by vendors who sometimes claimed that they were family heirlooms.
