

1: Relationship | Definition of Relationship by Merriam-Webster

Before you make the decision whether or not to call it quits, consider these reasons you might be feeling unsettled. 1. You don't see each other enough. Making time for one another is a big part of being in a relationship, but with school and work it can become just another thing you're trying to balance.

Is it fair to say you have too? I was feeling less than myself, like I was compromising my life goals with each second I stayed around those people. Mind you, these were both friendships and romantic relationships. I was guilty of it: Why did I have to sacrifice my happiness for what society says was right? While some difficult relationships can open our eyes to new perspectives and expand our awareness, some obviously shut us in and hinder our development. Our intuition will alert us one way or the other. It tells us, change and growth should feel good! But our intuition knows best; unlike our mind, its only motive is our happiness. It also represents all the internal turmoil that results from an unhealthy relationship. These are five signs that you are in a toxic relationship: The other person constantly puts you down as not good enough. They mock your personality, and you feel ashamed most of the time. You only feel pardoned when you take on the traits of the person doing the condemning or judging. Everything is about them and never about you. Instead of acknowledging your feelings, they battle with you until they get the last word. You find yourself unable to enjoy good moments with this person. Every day brings another challenge. It seems as though they are always raising gripes about you. Their attempt to control your behavior is an attempt to control your happiness. You have to put on a different face just to be accepted by that person. Whenever you aim to grow and improve yourself, the other person responds with mockery and disbelief. There is no encouragement or support for your efforts. Instead, they keep you stuck in old judgments insisting that you will never be any different than you are now. Embrace the answers that come from your intuition, as it wants the best for you—and this relationship might not be it. Take deliberate action according to your gut feeling. Maybe you choose to talk about your feelings with the other person, or you decide to put more space between the two of you. Taking any action is the best medicine. Without giving names, do you find yourself in a toxic relationship? Have you left a toxic relationship and want to share how that decision has changed your life? Or are you afraid to leave a toxic relationship because you fear the repercussions? Leave a comment and share your experience.
