Do this as soon as possible because some retailers have time limits on returns and refunds. Online retailers should provide return instructions on the site or on your receipt. With each person, calmly and accurately explain the problem and what you would like them to do. Keep a record of your conversations — who you spoke with and when, and what action they promised. Many companies provide a toll-free number or address for their customer service department on the product packaging, warranty, or receipt. If this is not the case: Look for a "Contact Us" link. Call for toll-free directory assistance. Use Social Media Social media offers an alternative to filing a formal consumer complaint. Many companies have people to monitor posts and complaints about their service on social media pages. Your post will be most effective if you use a reasonable tone and explain the problem clearly. To avoid negative perceptions, the company may respond quickly to your problem. Be clear and concise. Describe the item you bought and the problem, include serial or model numbers, and the name and location of the seller. State exactly what you want done and how long you are willing to wait for a response. Include copies of relevant documents, like receipts, repair orders, and warranties. Provide your name, address, and phone numbers. If an account is involved, be sure to include the account number. You may want to send your letter by certified mail and request a return receipt. Keep in mind that no one can guarantee you a refund. Con artists sometimes claim they can — but then insist on upfront fees or ask for your Social Security number or bank account information. State and Local Organizations.
