Samuel Thaxter , one of the most prominent and influential citizens in Hingham, became Colonel in a regiment and one of those commissioned to settle the boundary between Massachusetts and Rhode Island in 1703. In his early life, Lincoln worked on the family farm, and attended the local school. He followed his father into public life, becoming town constable at 21, and in 1721 he joined the 3rd Regiment of the Suffolk County militia where his father was colonel as an adjutant. He continued to be active in the militia during the French and Indian War , but saw no action, and was promoted to major by the end of the conflict in 1764. During this tenure political opposition rose in the province to Parliamentary tax measures, polarizing the political landscape of the colony. Lincoln continued to win election to this body, and was placed on committees overseeing militia organization and supply, a position that came to be of utmost importance when the American Revolutionary War broke out with the Battles of Lexington and Concord in April 1775. In May he directed the state forces that successfully drove the last Royal Navy ships from Boston Harbor. The idea was generally well received, with one representative writing that Lincoln was "a good man for a Brigadier General" and "a man of abilities", even though he had not "had much experience". He established his headquarters at the nearby Van Horne House. In the Battle of Bound Brook he was defeated by a much larger force under the command of Lord Cornwallis , barely escaping capture. Lincoln was ordered to coordinate the activities of the New England militia being recruited for the effort. General Schuyler asked Lincoln, from a base in southern Vermont , to harass the British supply line as the British moved south from Fort Ticonderoga toward Albany. Stark had previously held a Continental commission and resigned over a promotion snub, and had only agreed to serve in his native New Hampshire if he was not under Continental authority. By early September Lincoln had 2,000 men under his command, and launched several detachments at the British supply line. One of those detachments, led by Colonel John Brown , successfully harassed British positions outside Fort Ticonderoga, freeing American prisoners and even making an unsuccessful attempt to capture the fort in late September. These forces saw little action, which was concentrated on the American left. That evening Gates ordered Lincoln to perform reconnaissance; the British left fell back as Lincoln and his 1,000 man force probed them, and Lincoln was able to occupy the former British lines. In council that evening Lincoln recommended that the fort at Fort Edward be fortified against the possibility that Burgoyne would attempt to reach it and cross the river in an attempt to return to Ticonderoga. His son helped him return him to Hingham in February 1776, where he convalesced for several months. The injury left his right leg two inches shorter than the left, and for many years the ankle wound was prone to reopening and the danger of infection. Although he considered resignation over the slight, Washington and supporters in the Continental Congress assured him of his value to the army. Printed by John Dunlap Southern theater 1781 [edit] Main articles: Lincoln participated in the unsuccessful French-led siege of Savannah, Georgia in October 1778, after which he retreated to Charleston, South Carolina. He took command of the garrison of Charleston. In March the city was surrounded by a sizable British force dispatched from New York. After a relatively brief siege Lincoln was forced to surrender more than 5,000 men to Lieutenant General Sir Henry Clinton on May 12, 1780, but did so in a way that allowed the South Carolina militia to escape as well as some Continental forces, that annoyed the British toward Lincoln. Lincoln, desperate for more troops, had pleaded with the South Carolina legislature to arm 1,000 enslaved African Americans to ward off the approaching British. Rather than see armed slaves, the legislature began negotiations with the British commanders to allow the British forces to pass through South Carolina. The loss of the southern army at Charleston was one of the worst Continental defeats of the war. He was denied the honors of war in surrendering, due to the British annoyance at his facilitating the escape of SC militia units and some Continental forces, such as those with Lafayette and Lee, which deeply rankled Lincoln. Lincoln was paroled , and in the court of inquiry no charges were ever brought against him. The British subsequently sought to enlist large numbers of black soldiers. He led a large portion of the Army south from Head of Elk Maryland to Hampton, Virginia , to march to the west to Yorktown where the British were encamped. Lincoln played a major role in the Siege of Yorktown and the surrender of Lord Cornwallis on October 19, 1781. The uprising, one of whose consequences was increased calls for a stronger central U. Lincoln was one of only 10 men who received electoral votes during the first election for President and Vice President of the United States, [26] receiving the vote of an unrecorded elector from the State of Georgia. Lincoln also served as one of the first trustees of Derby Academy , founded in Hingham by Sarah Hersey Derby, widow of a wealthy Salem shipping magnate. In spite of the major role he played during the war, he tends to be less well-remembered than many of his contemporaries in the Continental Army.

Area Hingham Background on Hingham: In the year , Edmond Hobart, with his wife, their son Joshua, and daughters Rebekah and Sarah landed in Charlestown. Two other sons, Edmond Hobart Jr. These settlers found that the existing settlements had no room for them, and they chose a harbor lying inside the peninsula of Nantasket, named Bare Cove because the cove looked bare when the tide was out. The time of settlement is unknown, the first time Bare Cove was mentioned was in tax records dated September 25, The settlement was assessed a tax of 4 pounds to be paid to the colonial government. In , Peter Hobart and his family arrived in the colony from Hingham England.. Another son of Edmond Hobart, and a minister, he settled with his family in the little settlement. On September 2nd in the year , the Massachusetts court allowed the change of Bare Cove to Hingham, and on the eighteenth of the same month the first 29 proprietors of Hingham drew their house lots. Thomas Chaffe, immigrant ancestor and founder, immigrated from England to America in or as early as according to William H. Chaffee , in which year he settled in Hingham, Mass. He was not in the list of property owners in This small amount proves that he was unmarried at the time, as the amount of land for a house was given with regard to the size of the family. Samuel was born in in Hingham, Norfolk, England. Long in the History of Hingham published , pages The entry for land given to John Tucker in the Hingham records: This is the first mention of Chaffe in the new world, according to William Chaffee in the book. It is most likely that this date should be interpreted as In , there is this transaction: Given unto Thomas Chaffe by the towne for a house lott two acres of land Butting upon Batchellor street eastward bounded with the land of William Ludkin southward. Chaffee believed this indicated that at this time he was unmarried, as it was the custom of those days to grant small parcels of land to bachelors, as being sufficient for their needs. Bachelor Street is now known as Main Street, and the original Chaffe home lot is about opposite the old meeting-house. One more piece of property was given in that year to Thomas Chaffe by the town: Given unto Thomas Chaffe by the Towne for a greatt lott tenn acres of land lying upon the great playne on the second furlong to the westward of the centre, bounded with the land of Ralph Smith southward and with the Land of Thomas Turner northward. Butting upon the high wayes east-ward and westward. History of the state of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations: The American Historical Society, Inc. Nantasket is older than Hingham, as the first building was built by emigrants of Plymouth on or before There were to be at least thirty-two lots, and the planters were to take them in order; they were to have four acres of planting land and two acres of meadow land also. On May 29, , the name was changed to Hull, and in July, a church was formed there. In both Hingham and Hull, Thomas Chaffe was a fisherman and farmer. The name of his wife is not known. He probably married in Hull, as no mention of him or his family is found in the notes of Rev. Peter Hobart, of Hingham. The town records of Hull, before , have been lost. The next mention of him in the records is a deed, February 4, , in which he gives land over to Thomas Gill, of Hingham, and he and his son Joseph must have made a trip from Swansea, where they were living, in order to sign it. The last mention of him was in , when a list of his lands was given. Between and on May 30, , he had removed from Hull and settled in Rehoboth, then in Plymouth Colony. A deed has been found, dated May 30, , in which he sells to Thomas Loring Sr. A few months after the sale of his property in Hull he made his first recorded purchase of land in Rehoboth, of Stephen Paine, Sr. On April 11, , Thomas then of Wannamoisett, sold to Captain Thomas Willett and James Brown one of the two lots he received in the division of home lots. When Swansea was set off from Rehoboth in , his home in Wannamoisett became a part of the newly created town. He very likely owned land in Rehoboth, as in a deed in he calls himself of Rehoboth. He died March 6, , and an inventory of his estate taken May 15, of the same year. He was probably buried in the ancient Chaffee Burying Ground on his own farm. Thomas Chaffe was prominent and highly respected in the towns in which he resided. The town of Rehoboth was originally called by the Indians and after them by the English "Secunk" or "Seekonk". In July , some of the Pilgrims from the Plymouth settlement made a visit to the Indian Chief Massasoit, whose domain was known as the Sowams country, of which Wannamoisett, where Thomas Chaffee settled, formed a part. This was the first attempt made by the English to explore the interior and the spirit of westward emigration. As early as , the Plymouth settlers had a trading post at Sowams. Nathaniel and Joseph, probably born between and in Hull. Nathaniel Chaffee, son of Thomas Chaffe, was born between the year and , probably at Nantasket or Hull, Mass. Between and he settled in that part of Rehoboth which later became Swansea. On May 19, , he was chosen constable, and from that time was a large land owner, inheriting some from his father, and increasing his holding considerably by purchase. He bought sixty acres of land from Obediah Brown in Rehoboth, and later two parcels of land of twelve and a half and ten acres each from John Martin, of Attleboro. That he was highly valued as a citizen is evident from the fact that after his removal from Rehoboth he was invited to return to the town, and as an inducement was offered more land. Four months later he returned. Nathaniel Chaffee was a blacksmith, and from the nature of his work, and the dependence of early settlements on the work of the blacksmith, he held a prominent place in the life of the early settlement. The blacksmith in those days made practically all farm implements, household utensils, arms, bells, etc. Nathaniel Chaffee became a freeman in , on March 26, of which year he was elected constable. On March 22, , he was chosen tythingman policeman. He received numerous grants of land. He married, in Swansea, Mass. Dorothy; Thomas, born Oct. Nathaniel Chaffee source was probably born in Nantasket, Massachusetts later called Hull between and , and died in Rehoboth, Massachusetts, in September She also died in September Nathaniel Chaffee probably moved from Hull to Rehoboth between and with his parents and brother Joseph. In the part of Rehoboth where he lived, known as Wannamoisett, was set off as a separate town and called Swansea. About the same time it is recorded that: Ten acres More purchased of John Martin. During this war, which lasted nearly two years, the inhabitants of Rehoboth were kept in almost constant alarm; a number of them were, at different times slain; and the whole town, the garrison-houses excepted, was at one time laid in ashes. The events of this war, so far as connected with Rehoboth In , Nathaniel Chaffee was a blacksmith. In addition to shoeing horses, he was a worker in iron and other metals, making crude farming implements, household utensils and even casting bells. The town met being lawfully warned and chose Nathaniel Chaffe tything man," his duties being to preserve order in the meeting-house and to collect the moneys due for the support of the minister of the town. September 22, , Nathaniel went to the Swansea home of his brother, Joseph, who was ill. Joseph made his will and probably wished his only brother to witness it. At the same time he became one of the sureties in the sum of pounds for his sister-in-law, Annis Martin Chaffee and her sons, John and Joseph, Jr. Mary , 10 miles east of Exeter and was a major land owner in Barrington in May 3, , he gave "for and in Consideration of the good Will and affection which I have and do bear toward my Youngest Son, Noah Chaffe, Yeoman, twenty-four acres of land at half Mile Swamp in Rehoboth, being a Certain tract of Upland and Meadow ground. Both Nathaniel and his wife died in September , and a tradition from Rehoboth says that so devoted was he to his wife that he died of grief a few hours after her death. The old burying ground surrounding the Congregational Church, formerly in Rehoboth, and now in the village of Rumford, East Providence, Rhode Island, is supposed to be the burial place of Nathaniel and Experience, though no stones to their memory remain. He subsequently became very prominent in the life and affairs of Rehoboth, and took active part in civic life. On March 19, , he was chosen to the office of field driver. On November 21, , he and one hundred and ten others agreed to pay for building a new meeting house. On December 11, of that year, he was a member of a jury of trials. In he bought of Jeremiah Allen one hundred additional acres in Ashford. He was a large landowner and a considerably wealthy man, an influential citizen, and a highly respected member of the community. On March 28, , he became tythingman, and from that time until his death held public office continuously. Jonathan Chaffee married in Rehoboth, Mass. He died December 31, , leaving a will dated May 5, He is buried in the old burying ground formerly in Rehoboth, but now in the village of Rumford, R. Jonathan Chaffe December 31, , in the 89th year of his age. Jonathan, born June 25, ; Nathaniel, Oct. She married in Rehoboth, May 27, , Joseph 2 Armington. Hannah Carpenter Chaffee, mother Hannah Chaffee Armington, wife of Joseph 2 Armington, was a daughter of William and Miriam Searles Carpenter, as above stated, and granddaughter of William Carpenter, the founder of this family, which is one of the most notable of early American families. Ludkin and Turner would later become neighbours of Thomas in Hingham. Other ships in A Henry Smith from Norfolk, also on the Diligent also followed Thomas in Hingham to Rehoboth following a strong disagreement and split within the Puritan church.
