The Oxford Dictionary of National Biography is a collection of 50, specially written biographies of men and women who have shaped all aspects of the British past, from the earliest times to the end of the year. The stories of these lives - told in substantial, authoritative, and readable articles - have been published simultaneously in 60 print volumes and online. The editorial policy of the original DNB was remarkably inclusive: The Oxford DNB takes a similarly inclusive approach: The Oxford DNB covers people born in the British Isles; it also includes inhabitants of the USA and Commonwealth countries before independence, many British-born people whose main impact was made overseas, and many who were born elsewhere but whose impact within the United Kingdom was substantial. Everyone included in the old dictionary is in the Oxford DNB but all their biographies have been revised or completely rewritten to reflect modern scholarship. A further 13, lives of new subjects broadens the coverage of previously neglected areas in all periods. These include many articles on women and twentieth-century subjects as well as previously under-represented fields such as business and science. Over people who died between and have also been included for the first time. In order to ensure a well-balanced view of a subject we do not include any biographies of people that are still living. Owing to its accessible and authoritative coverage, the Oxford DNB will appeal to a wide readership: It is the essential biographical and historical resource for all major libraries. Editorial excellence Like the Oxford English Dictionary the project springs from a remarkable partnership between publisher and scholars. The Oxford DNB is constituted as a research and publishing project of the University of Oxford, with research funding from the British Academy, and all other funding and resources from Oxford University Press. Matthew FBA, in January Over 30 in-house research scholars, 12 external consultant editors and associate editors made recommendations about new subjects and specialist authors, and reviewed completed work for academic quality. The large community of people contributing to the Oxford DNB is spread around the world and made up of 10, academic and non-academic authors. The largest selection of national portraiture ever published The Oxford DNB contains 10, portrait illustrations, each shown next to the relevant biography. This special project was completed in partnership with the National Portrait Gallery in London. Images chosen for reproduction range from paintings, drawings, and sculpture to photographs, medals, and death masks. Nielsen Book Data This volume provides an alphabetical list of the 10, contributors to the "Oxford Dictionary of National Biography", and gives details of the articles they have contributed to the work.
