Take the best veggies of the season and create a tempting spread of grilled vegetarian apps, sides, and main dishes at your next BBQ. Meatless Monday is going to last all summer long.

I think all of us started eating barbecue sandwiches when we were very very young. Many restaurants were based around the tangy rich sweet red sauce. Not much more was on the menu besides corn and beans. All you have to do is chop and measure a few ingredients, heat up the mix in a skillet, pile it high on a bun and you will have one of the best sandwiches out there. Sandwiches are sort of king in our house. You can go in any direction you want with a myriad of ingredients and another favorite that you might want to try is Loaded Chickpea Salad Sandwich. So different and yet so good. They offered the casual and fun atmosphere just as pizza parlors do. For sure there was more than one restaurant having sawdust on the floor. It was an atmosphere of fun. This post contains affiliate links. Homemade Barbecue Sauce There are many homemade barbecue sauce recipes out there. I think there are recipes that families cherish and restaurants that guard the recipe as if it was gold. Follow this recipe to the tee and you will get the sweet and tangy sauce that we all love. A little of this and a little of that and you have a great meal. Try this vegan barbecue chicken sandwich recipe for your next casual lunch or dinner and you will receive some very nice compliments. I usually make largish batches of seitan and have it in the freezer but not his time. We are so lucky to have more and more vegan products in the grocery stores now. I think the ones I probably used were Gardein crispy tenders because I like to use ready-made products that take advantage of vital wheat gluten. There are probably a few varieties to choose from by now so just use your favorite. I kid you not.
