Voice of an Angel is the debut studio album by then-year-old soprano Charlotte Church, released in The Sony Music recording was extremely popular, selling millions of copies, and made Church the youngest artist in history with a number 1 album on the British classical crossover charts.

With help from tutors, she was able to manage both performing and school work, and said in many interviews that she was "just like every other girl her age". She left school at age 14. She was then introduced to the Cardiff impresario Jonathan Shalit, who became her manager and negotiated a contract with Sony Music. Her first album, Voice of an Angel, was a collection of arias, sacred songs, and traditional pieces that sold millions worldwide and made her the youngest artist with a No. 1 album. Her self-titled second album also included operatic, religious and traditional tracks. One, the soaring and inspirational Just Wave Hello, was the centrepiece of a millennium-themed ad campaign for the Ford Motor Company. The track reached No. 1. In 1999, she released Dream a Dream, an album of Christmas carols. In 2000, Church added more pop, swing, and Broadway with her album Enchantment. Church also handled other vocal passages throughout the score. Her next album, Tissues and Issues, would be a pop release. She was credited on the records as CMC her initials as it was her first foray into pop music. In 2001, Church issued her first pop album Tissues and Issues. Although these were released in Australia as well, they failed to reach the same level of success there. In April 2002, Church performed three concerts in Glasgow, London, and Cardiff, in venues holding between 2,000 and 3,000 people; the dates at London and Cardiff were sold out. In November 2002, it was announced that she and Sony had parted ways. According to her publicist, this was a mutual decision reached after a series of meetings throughout the year, which were held since her six-album contract had ended. There was speculation that Church had decided to take a break from her singing career to focus on her television show. Charlotte Church performing at Selfridges, In 2003, Church became Patron of the charity The Topsy Foundation UK, [13] helping to raise awareness and funds for its work to support rural communities in South Africa, empowering people infected with and affected by HIV and AIDS, through medical care, social support and skills development. Articles emerged in the UK press in March and April stating that she was still training classically, considering a return to classical crossover. In June 2003, she became pregnant with her son, Dexter Lloyd Henson. Church also mentioned that she has been working with a vocal instructor to keep her voice in check, and while she has never put a focus on her body image, she would like to get back into pre-pregnancy shape before resuming work. In June 2003, Church was interviewed for Hello! She said that she was currently in the studio, resuming work on a new album and that her partner, Gavin Henson, had been strongly encouraging her to get back to work pursuing the career that she has greatly missed since settling down. Return to music and Back to Scratch[edit] Church appeared on Friday Night with Jonathan Ross on 13 March 2003, where she confirmed that she had already begun writing and recording her sixth studio album. Church also stated that the album was of a different sound to previous ones, more mature with a "kooky" vibe. On 4 August 2003, Church made a new track, "Cold California", available to download from her website. The track album was produced by Martin Terefe. Her spokesperson released the following statement: "This is typical for these type of deals, which are investment deals rather than record deals. I can also say that the decision to terminate the term early, which suited both parties, was made well before the commercial release of the album". There was no falling out. It was a mutual decision. They decided to exit the deal". The third single to be released from the album, "Snow" was released on 11 April 2004. In 2004, she played herself in an episode of The Catherine Tate Show, in a sketch with the fictional character Joannie Taylor. After a pilot episode which caused some controversy and which was never released to the public, [27] the series began on 1 September on Channel 4. It has since concluded its eight-show run. A Christmas special aired on 21 December 2004. The show ended after its third series. Inside My Brain, in which she explores the subject of mental health and the various kinds of research being done in the field. She is a member of media campaigning group Hacked Off. As an artist, I find it hard to be taken seriously because my credibility has been blown to bits. After the settlement was announced in open court she made a lengthy statement [50] in which she said, "I have also discovered that despite the apology which the newspaper has just given in court, these people were prepared to go to any lengths to prevent me exposing their behaviour. They are not truly sorry. They are just sorry they got caught. The couple then bought a manor with a acre 8 hectare small holding in the Vale of Glamorgan in the village of St. The couple mentioned marriage on talk shows and in the press.
