What image just popped into your head? That stuffed pumpkin from Around My French Table? The perfect birthday cakes and frostings from Baking: From My Home to Yours. Or one of those real homemade French desserts from her latest book, Baking Chez Moi? Not everyone knows but there was life before Paris for Dorie. And many other books. Her first book was Sweet Times: Simple Desserts for Every Occasion way back in 1997. And that book was followed in by Waffles: From Morning to Midnight. Yes, there is a pancake book, too, but I happen to be a waffle person. My early childhood memories include the steam and smell of waffles hot in the iron, then pulled finger-burning hot, ready to be topped with fresh strawberries, butter and maybe maple syrup. There is one and only one waffle for me. Yes, that basic morning waffle is there. I did this one with fresh blackberries dappled with sugar, no syrup required [blog to shortly follow]. In that subtitle "From Morning to Night" Dorie says it all. There are waffle ideas here for 24X7 lives. And imagination abounds with: Chinese chili paste and sesame oil! Now, you are never too old to qualify as being a kid and therefore you too can enjoy: You can transform that soft waffle hot off the grill into waffle chips, with some extra oven time, and then combine flavored waffles with guacamole. Who cares when you can nibble on: This is what Amazon is for. The same box can bring you a good waffle iron and a great book, Waffles from the indomitable Dorie Greenspan.
