This also means we can offer you a tax incentive for your charitable donations. Their 1 problem is overpopulation. There are more dogs than available homes. The 2 problem dogs face is lack of proper training and that results in the surrender of the dog to a shelter or the street. Most dogs that end up in shelters are unneutered, untrained and under 2 years of age. Our solution is to help with some basic training and socialization so these dogs can become responsible, reliable housemates and socially good citizens. The 3 problem for dogs is that shelters are overcrowded and time is very short for the dogs that end up there. Many people will just not go to a shelter because they feel it will be too heartbreaking. Our solution is we remove as many adoptable dogs as we have space for and place them into foster homes. Each dog becomes part of the family. This insight helps us to match the dog with the best permanent home. The 4 problem that affects dogs is that people are not aware of the troubles dogs face. Popular movies can create a demand for a particular breed of dog. The bottom line of these evil people is profit without concern for the quality of the dogs produced. This can result in dogs that have costly genetic issues. Our solution is education. We provide information to raise awareness so people will not purchase puppies of unknown origin through pet stores. If there is no demand, there will be no business to support these people. Adoptable dogs come into our foster program in several ways. We go to overcrowded kill shelters and take out dogs who have been dumped on the streets by former owners, confiscated by the authorities due to neglect and abuse and those that are surrendered due to family illness or death. We help stray dogs right within our own community that have been abandoned on the street or mysteriously appear in a neighbors fenced backyard. Puppies born to strays or injured dogs are another example of dogs we often rescue. Often due to extenuating circumstances people must give up a pet and they act responsibly by asking for assistance in finding a home instead of just abandoning their pet to a shelter. We help by posting their pet and screening applicants. Each dog receives a physical exam by a veterinarian. Vaccinations are administered as well as any necessary medications. The dogs live in a safe environment where they regain their self-confidence and learn to trust again. Find My Perfect Dog Your information is never shared.

Loss and theft can and does happen in the blink of an eye. Yes, even here in Montclair. The door or gate is open a fraction too far or too long and the dog seizes the opportunity to bolt. An Upper Montclair neighbor recently told us the tale of a lost dog. While out responsibly walking her own dog on a leash, two joggers approached accompanied by a leash-less chocolate Labrador Retriever. My neighbor smiled at the joggers and announced that her dog was friendly - was theirs? The dog had been following them since they started their jog in West Orange! This story does have a happy ending for two reasons. The dog was wearing a collar with a readable pet identification tag and he had the good fortune to cross paths with a compassionate woman who brought him inside and called the phone number on the tag. So, what would you do in the event your dog is either lost or stolen? Read on for preventive measures and action plan tips. Some preventive measures would be to: Obedience train your dog and demonstrate the boundaries of the property by walking your pet within the limits of the yard. Also familiarize your pet with the immediate neighborhood so he can find his way back home. License your dog and keep his rabies vaccination current. Both procedures provide metal tags to be worn by the dog not buried in a drawer. The tags bear numbers that can be traced back to you through the town and the vet. A medical tag is also a good idea if the dog has some special condition that requires medication. Consult your vet about a microchip or tattoo for your dog as added insurance if you have to positively identify your pet. Always have some recent photos of your pet for circulation. Scan one into the computer so it can be dispatched online. If your yard is fenced check periodically for escape routes. We found a tunnel under our fence dug from the outside by an animal trying to get in. Make sure the dog really isn't in the yard, house or garage. Report the loss to the police. The Montclair Police assured me they dispatch the call to the patrol. Put that recent photo on a flier with your phone number. Hand out and post fliers everywhere you can think of in the surrounding community. In short make that flier work for you! Knock on your neighbors door and round up some willing volunteers to conduct a search. Physically go to ALL the local shelters and agencies responsible for picking up stray and lost animals within at least a mile radius. Remember that someone may pick up your dog and take it home some distance away, only to turn it in to a shelter in their area. You will need to go more than once and FAST because some facilities only hold dogs 72 hours or less! Just calling without going in person is NOT very effective. The way you describe your dog may not be the way a shelter would describe it. Also, your pet may get dirty or matted very quickly, altering his appearance. Contact local rescue organizations or if you have a purebred dog check with that specific breed rescue. If a person that is helping your dog fears the dog will be euthanized at a shelter they might ask for help from a rescue group. A grim idea is to check with the highway department county, state and town. This should also be done in person. Be sure to leave a photo flier in each place. Place an ad in the local newspaper and the papers in surrounding areas as well. Get out looking early in the morning. Most lost animals lay low at night and pick up speed in the morning when the community comes to life.
