White birch, sandy-bottom swimming and trophy walleye are what the north woods and water are famous for. Sailing, wind-surfing, kayaking or bicycling-all have a place at Kangaroo Lake. Door County, the uncommon peninsula that is home to Kangaroo Lake, is a very special place. This narrow strip of land separates Green Bay from the main body of Lake Michigan in the north eastern section of Wisconsin. No one seems to be sure how Kangaroo Lake got its name. As early as 1800, Lake Michigan nautical maps showed Kangaroo Lake-it may be a corruption of a local Native American place name. Less than one half mile inland from the shore of Lake Michigan, 1-acre Kangaroo Lake was settled early in the 1800s by Scandinavian, Irish and German immigrants who labored at farming and logging. Ice was harvested for sale off the lake in winter. The climate was ideal for orchards, still grown today in the area. This causeway is now County Road E. By the early 1800s, doctors and professionals from the St. Louis area were bringing their families to Kangaroo Lake for the summer. Small summer homes and cottages sprang up around the southern bay of the lake, often to be used only in the summer months. Some of the small resort cottages built early in the century are still standing today, updated and available for rent by the week or the summer. Most development is pleasantly spaced at a distance from other cottages, avoiding the densely-packed lakeshore so common farther south. Echo Island, mid-lake, is in private hands. Recently, timeshare condos have been developed with luxury amenities that bring in a more affluent summer crowd. Because of the large amount of wetland acreage, substantial areas of the Kangaroo Lake shore have never been developed, leaving vast areas for wildlife, including deer, fox, coyotes and birds of all varieties. The entire shallow north bay around the inlet of Piel Creek is under the protection of the Nature Conservancy. Access is only by foot and provides a fine day trip for bird watching, wildflowers and wetland exploration. An additional six sections of the shoreline are considered protected, no-wake areas to preserve native reeds and aquatic plants. Nearby country roads and trails are available for bicycling and snowmobiling. There is truly space to roam at Kangaroo Lake. Excellent walleye fishing is an early spring draw to Kangaroo Lake. Several trophy fish have been pulled from the clear spring-fed waters. Most resort cottages are heated and open for business all four seasons. Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources DNR maintains a public launch site on the east side of the lake that will accommodate small and medium-sized boats. Most rental cottages have watercraft provided as there is no local commercial boat rental. Unlike so many other popular resort lakes, Kangaroo Lake has no commercial development other than rental cottages, and thus maintains its peaceful atmosphere. One restaurant is located on County Road E, and many cottages meet there for breakfast with friends. Daytrips in the area around Kangaroo Lake abound, from wineries, orchards, campgrounds, nature trails, and even a state-owned golf course at Peninsula State Park ten miles from the lake. As an added special treat, indulge your nostalgia with an evening at the 1950s-style drive-in theater near the State Park entrance. A visit to Bjorklunden, part of Lawrence University, is an interesting side-trip. Bjorklunden is a 10-acre estate which contains a small wooden chapel, Boynton, built between 1880 and 1890 that contains 41 hand painted frescoes. The Door County Visitors Guide, available on-line, contains maps and schedules for a huge number of attractions in Door County, including biking paths, lighthouses and orchards. Few year-round residents brave the winter at Kangaroo Lake on a regular basis except for the resort cottage owners who are always glad to provide you lodging for hunting, ice fishing and winter sports. Properties are available for sale at surprisingly reasonable price, and local realtors can connect you with either rentals or year-round homes. So, come to Kangaroo Lake and indulge your childhood dreams of a traditional Door County summer.

Dreams make a lot of scientists angry because they are almost impossible to understand. Yet, there are a lot of proven facts which some scientists were able to crack. Some say that the dreams come from our soul, some say from our memories, some even say that they foretell the future. Maybe they do all of that simultaneously. Scientists have proven that there are more types of dreams, there are REM dreams and NREM dreams, also there are more stages of dreaming, like Hypnagogia, Deep dreaming, Hallucinating, Delirium, Trance and there are people who act differently while dreaming like Sleep walking, Sleep talking, Sleep crying etc. The important thing is that every single one of us dreams about something every night. Some scientists made an experiment with people who suffer from amnesia and normal people to see if dreams are connected with our memory of everyday life. Both groups were given a task to play Tetris every night before they fall asleep for about 1 hour. All of them reported their dreams at the Hypnagogia stage, that is the stage where we are neither awake nor asleep usually in that stage we dream about falling from stairs or cliff or something and make that ninja move that awakes us. This could mean that dreams are in fact result of our memory, but not our declarative memory. So the dreams are formed from our implicit memories, the ones that are deep in our sub consciousness, and the same memories that may say much more about us than we can consciously say about ourselves. They say that when we fall asleep and we go through that stage of Hypnagogia we lose our ego, so when we get to REM Rapid Eye Movement dreaming we are most honest to ourselves. While we dream without our ego we are more capable to show ourselves what really bothers us in our lives so we can solve it, that is why while we dream the dreams have a lot of sense and when we wake up after 10, 20, 30 minutes they lose sense and seem bizarre. We block the message and usually forget the dream. So our dreams try to guide us to solve our emotions and problems in life, using our implicit memories that are deep in our sub consciousness but here is our ego, our firewall to block that message. The most interesting theory is yet to come. Some scientists say that the brain has so much potential and power that enables us to calculate the future, or as some say possible futures. Everything that happens around us is a chance, a probability. Some number like coefficients on football bets. By actions and chances of those actions happening again, some other variables, scientists believe is possible to calculate what will happen next and what the probability of that actually happening is. Similar like they do in casinos. In theory if you know all this, and some other variables, compared to the past actions, you can calculate what is most likely to happen in the future. The scientists say that the brain has the power to store all of this in our sub consciousness. Every little unimportant thing that is happening around us and based on that and on history, our brain can sub consciously calculate what is most likely to happen. So when we sleep it warns us, but as you know, not everything means as it seems in our dreams. Sometimes good things mean bad and bad things mean good like dreaming that somebody dies means that he will live longer. Scientists say that our brain shows us memories and images that only we understand on our own way and mean something only to us so we can better understand what our brain and subconscious are trying to tell us. That is why sometimes we dream something as innocent as flower and we feel bad, because sometime in our lives we experienced something with flower that meant bad to us, like seeing a bad movie where a bad guy leaves a flower to everyone he murders and that information is implanted in our brain, in our subconscious. Be that as it may, the dreams have a lot of meaning in or lives. They decide most of our mood through the day. There are a lot of times we wake up in a bad mood. This is because we dreamed of something bad that we forgot. There are times we are happy. The dreams show our problems, our wishes. They show things we have forgotten, things we never will forget. They may even show the possible future. Dreams will always stay our biggest mystery because we are our biggest mystery. You can contact Dejan on his Facebook page or website.
