Below are 4 variations of an easy Middle C arrangement, 3 with a bit of harmony. First, a basic Middle C arrangement: Next, a harmonized "Grumpy Sailor" song. And now the usual lyrics, plus some lettered notes: The same harmonized Middle C arrangement, without the lettered notes: Below is the late elementary long version with the usual lyrics, full of sound and fury. The surging energy created by the LH of this easy piano sheet music keeps it driving till the very end. Lots of repetition - but be careful of the fingering The LH is easy open chords, the same pattern every verse. The RH, too, is almost unchanging from verse to verse, but each repetition has a bit of a twist, or a register change that gives it a fresh feeling. I have found that the fingering needs to be insisted on from the very first especially with aural learners. Turn practice into a game A good way to make sure this happens is to set a goal for them: As soon as I announce this challenge, they try to accomplish it right then -- and some do it! Dynamics change for contrast On repetition 3, both hands jump up high. This is a good opportunity for contrast -- a pianissimo moment in the midst of all the commotion! The LH stays just where it was, but appears temporarily in the top staff. Then at the last repetition, the hands must fly apart quickly as RH goes right again, and LH drops deep into the bass.
