January Blog Archives Wednesday, January 31 9: It was a beautiful Saturday with sunshine and clear air. It was definitely going to be a new challenge. Along with my guide Matthew, we put on our helmets and climbing harnesses and hooked onto the safety cable with our carabiners. The route was mostly a vertical cliff. After I finished, my Garmin indicated an elevation gain of 2, feet. Climbing became increasingly more and more difficult. At times I found it very hard to find a good place to step or to stand while reattaching my carabiners. Every so often we paused for a brief water break. Vertical rock climbing requires you to stay in the moment and not let your mind wander. Fortunately, I felt pretty strong the whole way and was thrilled when we finally made it to the top and began our descent down a mountain path. It sure was an adrenalin kick. I was glad I was able to take my GoPro camera with me, mounted on my climbing helmet. This climb is a "must do" for anyone who enjoys a challenge. By far the best part was climbing with an experienced mountain guide who kept me on track and never let me get discouraged. A Via Ferrata allows you to experience the mountains in a unique way. It takes a combination of strength and balance to make it to the amazing views at the top. You use a completely different set of muscles than you do when running. It was days before my calves had fully recovered from the climb. The reward comes with confronting your fatigue and going to the edges of your abilities and experience. For me, a great climb is one that I finish. A vertical rock face is not to be taken lightly. Monday, January 29 6: What Christ asks of His disciples is not so much exposition of doctrine about Him as witness to His power. Now witness to His power can be given by the most illiterate if he has had experience of it. It does not require long training for a man to say: Christ did not require any long training in doctrine when He said to the Demoniac of Gadara: Instead of just focusing on pounds, the new Shapa approaches your health in a more holistic way. In Greek 4, we talk about a lot more than Greek. When the church in Antioch sent out Barnabas and Saul, it never intended their missionaries to set up a chain of institutions to be kept under the control of the sending church. Whatever churches were planted would be deeply rooted in their host countries. They would be "home grown" congregations, integrally identified with those people who would both lead and follow in those churches. As a church planter, Paul never intended to become the pastor of the work at Corinth or elsewhere. He facilitated the work of others who would be appointed by the Holy Spirit for leadership there. We make a very grave mistake, I believe, when we think expatriates such as Timothy and Titus were the "pastors" of the churches they were involved with in Ephesus or Crete. He took as his model for ministry the kenosis pattern of Jesus Christ, a model of other-orientation and costly servanthood Phil. Paul consistently labored in the best interests of others rather than himself. Even as an apostle, Paul refused to arrogate to himself exclusive powers. He eagerly sought to train others who would carry on his pioneer ministry. In Antioch, Barnabas and Saul worked side by side in discipling the church in the ways of Jesus. Little wonder that the church at Antioch, once it had been well established in the teachings of Jesus, had a burden for the nations. Barnabas and Saul went on to be commissioned by the church for the work of church planting. In all of these places, the perpetuation of the Gospel ministry was predicated upon members of the local congregations becoming leaders of the churches among them. Ministry training was accomplished through local training, not by sending church leaders away from their homes and communities. Today, forms of distance learning include seminars, guided self-study, internet chat rooms, Skype, and interactive video links via satellite to widely dispersed students, allowing them to study without interrupting and disrupting their customary lifestyle. My own Greek DVD series is being used all over the world to provide instruction in beginning Greek to pastors who otherwise would have no access to such training. Discipleship thus takes place in a living local church context. It is people-related rather than textbook- or professor-related. When the church in the book of Acts became centralized in Jerusalem, God scattered it through persecution. Without decentralization, the church could not reach its maximum potential as a witnessing community. But scattered, the church preached wherever it went, carrying out the Great Commission. Within these scattered congregations, God provided leaders directly. In Acts we read, "Paul and Barnabas appointed elders for them in each church and, with prayer and fasting, committed them to the Lord, in whom they had put their trust" Acts Nationalization is an act of trust: By insisting on control or leadership of national institutions, as some missionary organizations seem to do today, expat missionaries belie their professed commitment to servanthood. The apostle Paul pioneered the local ministry model. It deserves emulating today. Wherever I travel, my goal is to come alongside the national churches, both leaders and led, and assist them to the best of my limited abilities. My approach is intentionally cooperative. I seek to take no leadership role. I am there to serve, not to be served. It is this true "partnership in the Gospel" Phil. Dave Sunday, January 28 His section on Eph. Let me try to summarize it for you. Remember, Markus Barth was no conservative evangelical. He was a professor in a Reformed university in Basel. Yet above all he was a biblicist. At some point, you and I are going to have to become the same thing. But to my summary: This leads to an aristocratic and ecclesiastical interpretation that falsely distinguishes between the mass of "saints" and the superior class of "clergy" who are distinct from them. In this view, laypeople are only the beneficiaries of the work of the ministry; they may benefit from it, but only official ministers can carry it out. These interpretations are nothing less than "arbitrary distortions of the text. They should also be dispensers of grace. Even the weakest members of the body are indispensable. Every one of the special ministers is a servus servorum Dei [a servant of the servants of God]. I loved him when I sat in his lectures and seminars in Basel and I love him now. He never treated faith in an abstract, theoretical way. Yes, the church needs specialized and gifted leaders. Paul says as much in our text. But the call of God to fulltime Christian service comes to every believer who has ears to hear. We are all "joints" in the body of Christ and connected to each other. We may therefore choose to either edify or ignore our calling. Will I abdicate my responsibility to the leaders or will I build up the body by building up this brother or that sister? The special ministers of the church may model equipping for us, but we can never delegate this work completely to them. How to flesh this out? Local Baptist Church Ministers: Every Member Assistants to the Ministers: And the glory would all go to Jesus. And even non-believers might be curious enough to darken your doorsteps. And the kingdom of God would advance. The most powerful of all teaching is not direct verbal statement, but habitual attitude and action which takes the truth of the idea upon which it is based for granted. This is exactly what Paul meant when he wrote in 1 Thess. All men naturally tend to leave direct missionary work to a professional class when there exists a professional class whose special duty it is to do it. Have you ever read anything truer? Still, my dream is that my students might see the occasional nature of the documents we call "Gospels. When Matthew wrote his Gospel, he did not intend to supplement Mark: There is little doubt that Luke expects that his more complete Gospel will displace his predecessors, even though he may not intend to disparage their earlier efforts. Whether or not John knew of the existence of one or more of the synoptic gospels, he seems to have expected that his Gospel would win wide acceptance as the Gospel.

Read Testimonies Share this: I am eternally thankful to God for using me to share His Word all over the world weekly. God has given me to them and given them to me. If you are on the list, I want you to know that I pray for you and am thankful to God for you. You are special to me and I pray that the Lord continue to speak to you through this ministry. Many of you have emailed me many testimonies over the years. I just recently started saving them and wanted to share a few via this forum. Thank you for encouraging me to continue to be an encouragement. This is what you have said: Rick, With respect to your Victory over Stress series: The word is so amazing and illuminating when the teacher is anointed. Thanks for allowing God to use you as the vessel to move our ship of faith from the port of doubt, to the ocean of belief. You took a powerful contextual turn within the series. Powerful is what you call prayer, faith, and performance. We generally miss the nexus between prayer and performance—the faith and belief that God can and will give us the desires of our heart in accordance with His will. Moreover, the posse, if you will, who followed Christ and how He tailored it to meet not only the immediate task at hand, but also the legacy of those decisions is a lesson in and of itself. Each morning I look forward to clicking on that email in anticipation of what the Lord is going to say. This devotion is simple yet thought-provoking, short yet powerful—it makes my quiet time with God each morning easy but life-changing. I am so thankful for Rick and how God has anointed him. He lives what he teaches, and God is using his faithfulness to impact my life and the lives of so many others. His tireless efforts and devotion to fulfilling his purpose have made and continue to make an eternal difference. I was given oversight of the Gospel Congregation when I arrived. For the first time I heard new songs sung with unparalleled expression. One young man soon caught my attention and eventually my respect and admiration; that young man was Rick Pina. At that point Rick was still young in the faith; saved for less than five years. However, his maturity in Christ was far beyond a toddler, beyond a teenager and beyond most adults. We worshiped together, we served together, we prayed together, we laughed together, and we learned together. I was the chaplain, Rick was the WO1 but more often he was the teacher, I was his student. I listened, I learned. I gained, I grew. I thank the Lord for our friendship, our relationship as father and son! The Gospel Congregation was the most highly attended service on Eagle Base. In early , just before I returned to the states I appointed Rick as the Pastor of the congregation; a post he honored with Godly service. Rick writes with clarity and boldness. His daily expositions are pointed, principled, and powerful. Truly it is an inspiration to all of us and an example we should all follow if we are to be more like Christ. Secondly, with him traveling all the time he is always dedicated to get this word out. Whether it be in Iraq, Germany, or many hotels he stays at in his travels, he is always faithful to get out this word. That is a lesson for all of us to emulate. I have never forgotten that message and I use it in my daily life today. But before I go to PT and do my military work, I wake up every morning during weekdays at 4: I seek the Lord early in the morning before everything else in my day. That is a standard that I thank God for and wish to pass on to generations after me. Thank God for Rick and the ministry God has given him. Rick, the man, is an awesome Husband, respected Father, and imitated Brother and committed Son. Rick, the man of God, is a mentor, teacher, educator, drum major, icon, leader, role model, and much, much more. He is a man in whom God has entrusted with His Word, and has given him a charge, to proclaim it to a dying and decaying world. He has accepted that charge, and has become an instrument of righteousness in America and abroad. Elder Pina is a priest of God, who is able to bring God to the people and bring the people to God, through the Word of God. I love and admire the gift that is in him, because he has one foot in heaven and one foot in the earth. On a day-to-day basis Pastor Pina has ministered to the very soul of our being. Many times the enemy has been on our trail and was unable to consume me because just in the right moment of time the Lord would give us what we needed to see the Storm from his perspective. I really rejoiced and teared up too. Thanks so much for allowing God to use you to teach us. Blessings to you and your family. My prayer is that he will open up the doors of heaven and let all manner of blessing pour in you and your family. Also, bless you with more wisdom and revelation that you may continue to be the blessing pastor you are to us. God bless and we look forward to continue with the proverbs. Thanks for remaining obedient to Him through all I know you must be going through as well. Our God is an awesome God and Loves us beyond our own understanding. I try to live this list of God Characteristics Agape everyday. You explain them so well. God has Amplified this list in me! Now every waking moment is Ministry for me! through this teaching I can love my enemies, Do Good to them that hate me, Pray for them which despitefully me and persecute me! and more. And I firmly pray to do it. I prepare everyday now to give a sermon with my life, what I speak to others, my actions toward them, how I do my work, etc! This series is paramount. We cannot live fruitful lives as Christian apart from the love of God. I was informed of this website some while back and I have been blessed in my spirit each and everyday. I try to take heed to everything that is mentioned and share it with others that they may grow in the likeness of Jesus Christ. In my closing I ask that everyone go out and share the goodness with the lord and all he has done for you! God Bless and continue to lift me up in your prayers as I continue to pray for the blessings of God upon your life! It has been so refreshing to see your diligence, discipline and great regard for studying and sharing the word of God so profoundly over the years. Thank you for sharing it with me and countless others who have been helped to grow closer to Christ through your own obedience. GOD has been working tirelessly in my life. I am believing GOD for miracles regarding how the people that I work with and for perceive and react to my actions and the things that I say. Unfortunately, in the past I tried to do things that would change their mind. I have now given it up to GOD to work in the hearts and minds of those who feel ill will towards me. I have asked GOD to meter my mouth and mind so that I think ill against no man. He has done that. I am happy joyous and free. GOD has fulfilled all of my needs. My family is healthy, I enjoy my job, I am exactly where I am supposed to be, my family deals with finances rationally so that we have peace of mind, and I live comfortably. I hope to remember this feeling for those times when I forget how I feel right now.

Now Canadians can vaunt their openness to the Other: Before that, its immigrants were largely other Scandinavians. Welcome in alien ethnies, eat lots of exotic food, and we all live happily ever after But there is indeed a final frontier. The Final Frontierâ€”Self-replacement Multiculturalism, we have thus seen, is a welcoming in of alien ethnic groups truly alienâ€”not Danes into Sweden, but Somalis into Sweden. But where is the line between Multiculturalism and Self-replacement? It seems there is a slow evolution. First, we welcome in alien groups. Then, we start to offer them perks that we do not offer our own group. Lastly, in the terminal phase, we call on them to replace us. As Robert Merry puts it, When in history have we seen a civilization turn on itself with such savagery as we see in the West today? That would probably be the first time an indigenous population has voluntarily become a minority in its historic homeland. What is the evidence? To Clinton, an America without a white majority is a worthy destiny. Within ten years this is what it is going to look like all over Europe. Black, brown, yellow, white, Asians and Arabs, Africans, you people from America, India, people of all faiths â€” come and help us! Stream in and re-people us, but thoroughly! Not that we use the word as a pejorative--anti-smoking propaganda in the U. Nonetheless the images used in diversity campaigns have greatly evolved. In the past they were often of, say, a multi-racial group of friends, or a black family interacting with a white family. Old-fashioned diversity The new diversity images are altogether different. We now have advertisers, TV shows, etc. In this sense, the Euro parent, but not the Afro one, is erasing his ethnic heritage. One finds it hard to imagine, however, a campaign urging Thais to stop giving birth to Thais, or Persians to stop giving birth to Persians, or Igbos to stop giving birth to Igbos. Far less popular, but still common: Hollywood has jumped on this bandwagon full force as well:

Saturday But the angel reassured them. He would like to be at home but the doctors have informed him that he would rather go ahead and take care of these problems rather than go home and have to turn right around and come back. Both of his parents are staying at the hospital around the clock so please continue to pray for Dustin and for his parents, Chris and Sherry and for the rest of his family as they anxiously await his recovery. Please remember my Mom and Step-Dad, Ruby and Aubrey Stokes as they have been without phones and electricity for 2 days now and Aubrey is going through some continuing medical tests of his own which we pray for a good outcome and my Mom for her strength and health. Thank you for your continued prayers. She can do nothing. They still have a huge need. Emily cannot be left aloneâ€”at all! If any of you are available to help her by coming and staying with her, helping with kids, etc. Today marks one week that Don has been home. It is still sinking in as we embrace life as we know it. We have been welcomed in a warm, wonderful way by this community of believers. We as a family continue to receive support in amazing ways. We are so grateful! We are so blessed. We see God in such a powerful way. We could have never expected how helpless it feels to come home and realize that we have been so needy. This certainly continues to be a place where God is teaching me about His amazing love and my ability to accept from others. I continue to learn from this experience as well. We have so much to give thanks for this week. I have some prayer requests and want to give times for visitation with Don. Prayer requests and answered prayer: It is so good to see their faces and spend special time with them. We needed them a few extra days. Pray for a safe trip for them. This is still very hard for him. Today was a day where is was most tired and did not feel well. This has been busy week for him. We continue to give thanks to our God for the body of Christ who has reached out to meet our needs. WE are most grateful! Don will be taking visitors starting this week. This Sunday from 2 â€” 4pm. Please call ahead of time: Call me if you have questions. Blessings to you our family and friends Diane George H. Will October 4, â€” December 11, U. Will passed away at 5: Helena Parish Hospital, Greensburg. He was 91, a native of Lockhart, TX and a resident of Kentwood. An on-line Guestbook is available at <http://www.guestbook.com>: Dear Intercessors, this is Eleanor Witcher of the International Prayer Strategy Office, encouraging you to pray for others as we move through this holiday season. We all have a mental image of the ideal holiday season. Americans have a distinctly cultural view of Christmas that includes presents, snow, and nativity scenes. But Christmas looks quite different in Saudi Arabia! There are no Christmas trees for sale, and it is hard to find Christmas decorationsâ€”certainly no snow. Pray a special blessing for Christians living there. Many come from countries all around the world and they spend the holiday away from families. Others face persecution from fellow countrymen. Pray that their celebration will be rich as they focus on the real reason for Christmas. In Durban, South Africa, international, national and local holidaymakers are visiting beaches and other attractions. Pray for safety for all, in what is not considered to be such a safe environment these days. Pray that missionaries and Christian groups will find opportunities to share Jesus without fear as they mingle with holiday-goers at a time when many are curious as to the reason for the season. The Xhosa tribe of South Africa does not really celebrate Christmas. Since it is in the middle of summer, many of the church programs are suspended and many pastors take the whole month offâ€”there are no Christmas plays, musicals or indigenous Christmas songs. Please pray for team members as they minister in the different communities, teaching the significance of Christmas. Orissa Christians fear violent Christmas. The importance of missions giving. We need a character bailout. Emboldened by the night, he decides to try for that important first kiss. My parents will see us! Can you imagine if we get caught? In a sleepy voice the sister says: Or I can do it. But for crying out loud, tell him to take his hand off the intercom button! And be reminded that there are no secrets we can keep from God. He sees all, He knows all, and He appreciates the person who is honest enough to allow God into every aspect of his life. For those who want to live in secret, the day is coming when those secrets will be revealed. Have a great day! It is for all girls and ladies! Then, you will realize why our annual offering for International missions is named in her honor.

President, I send a resolution to the desk. The clerk will state the resolution. The assistant legislative clerk read as follows. A joint resolution SJ. Whereas on September 11, , terrorists hijacked and destroyed four civilian aircraft, crashing two of them into the towers of the World Trade Center in New York City, and a third into the Pentagon outside Washington, D. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the resolution? Hearing no objection, the resolution is before the Senate. The majority leader is recognized. President, it is with pain, sorrow, anger, and resolve that I stand before this Senate, a symbol for years of the strength of our democracy, and say that America will emerge from this tragedy, as we have emerged from all adversity, united and strong. The America in which we awoke today is far different from the one in which we awoke yesterday. This morning, as our rescue workers and medical personnel continue their heroic work, we begin to truly understand the enormity of what happened. My heart aches for the people of New York, our men and women serving at the Pentagon, the passengers and crew of the four hijacked aircraft, and for their families and friends. These attacks were an assault on our people and on our freedom. They aimed at the heart of the American community and the symbols and structures of our economic and military strength. As an American, as an elected representative, I am outraged. As a husband and a father, I am pained beyond words. Last night we sent the message to the world that, even in the face of such cowardly and heinous acts, the doors of democracy will not close. The world should know that the Members of both parties in both Houses stand united. The full resources of our Government will be brought to bear in aiding the search and rescue and in hunting down those responsible and those who may have aided or harbored them. Nothing--nothing--can replace the losses that have been suffered. I know there is only the smallest measure of inspiration that can be taken from this devastation. But there is a passage in the Bible from Isaiah that I think speaks to all of us at times such as this: The bricks have fallen down, but we will rebuild with dressed stone; the fig trees have been felled, but we will replace them with cedars. That is what we will do. We will rebuild and we will recover. The people of America will stand strong together because the people of America have always stood together. And those of us privileged to serve this great Nation will stand with you. God bless the people of America. I yield the floor. President, any expression of sympathy for the suffering today is too weak. Every expression of horror at this outrage is too mild. But we must confront these acts and find a way to come together and make sure that this kind of heinous, vicious action will not happen again in America. This premeditated action against innocent men and women and children and their families, at the symbols of our country--our economic strength, our military strength, and most importantly, our freedoms--is unimaginable. Our prayers are going out to the victims and their families, to those who are suffering in so many ways in New York, in Virginia, and in Pennsylvania--in all of America. We have such a debt of appreciation to pay to those who have struggled mightily with these catastrophic events at the Pentagon and at the World Trade Center and in our cities and states--the volunteers, those who gave their lives trying to deal with this terrible moment. To our allies and to those around the world who see this not just as a strike at America, but at freedom and democracy all over the world, and to those who already have extended hands of cooperation, understanding, and support, we appreciate it on behalf of the American people. We must get on with important work. But it is important also to make it clear that this is not business as usual. But we are going to act now, tomorrow, and in the weeks and months ahead to deal with those people who have taken these actions and with those who have supported them. We will take whatever action is necessary in the Congress, working with the administration, working with the American team to stop this kind of terrorism. Whatever we call it, we must put ourselves in a war footing. We have come together. There are moments in history when in the past the people of this country have set aside conflicts and prejudices and passions and have come together. But we must continue to do so, regardless of region, religion, party, philosophy, or anything else. Congress has a right and a responsibility to learn what has happened here. We must find out who did it. And we must be prepared to take actions and fight terrorist attacks in the future. This is not a time for timidity. This is not a time for pontification. Yes, we need to be sure of our actions. We need to be committed and determined. We need to be bold. Here in the Congress I hope we will think about how we most effectively [Page: S] can fulfill our responsibilities to do everything we can to fight terrorism, to provide the funds necessary in this fight and to provide the aid so necessary for those who have been damaged and have lost so much. Just in a few hours we will take up the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill. In that bill is funding for counterterrorism. Can we do more? What should we do? I call on the Senate, as I know it will, to rise to this occasion, to be bold. The American people expect no less. I yield the floor, Mr. The Senator from Nevada, Mr. President, Senator Daschle, the majority leader, has asked that I announce that Senator Biden, the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, will manage the discussion on this resolution today. I join my colleagues in saying that my thoughts and prayers are with those individuals and families who were victimized by the cowardly terrorist acts perpetrated against the United States yesterday. We in Congress stand united in our resolve to ensure that President Bush has every necessary resource as he leads our great Nation forward in the coming days and weeks and months. I am very confident that every Member of the Senate views this as an American issue. No party affiliation, no partisanship, no attempt to gain political advantage--nothing--will erode our solidarity or undermine our united resolve as we respond to protect our country and our people. I am very proud of the Capitol Police. We all should be. Every day they put their lives on the line for us. My heart goes out to the police officers and firemen in New York who lost their lives attempting to help other people. We need more than a plaque on a wall for Officer Chestnut and Detective Gibson. In their honor, we need to build a Visitors Center, because Officer Chestnut and Detective Gibson gave their lives protecting us, our staffs, and the millions of people who visit the Capitol complex every year. Building the Capitol Visitors Center is critical to ensuring the safety of all those who come to the U. We will do everything in our power to support President Bush in his efforts to ensure that those who have done such evil and perpetrated these despicable acts do not go unpunished. But let me be clear about what we know. America is the greatest democracy and force for freedom the world has ever known. All of America will stand together to make sure that we rebuild and that we fight back, and that Americans continue to enjoy the freedoms and liberty that are the hallmark of this great country of ours. Future generations of Americans must never again feel the profound pain and grief that we feel today from Nevada to New York and back. As we mourn the loss of our fellow Americans, we must focus on the task ahead. And in the war against those who would use terror to attack innocent civilians, our democratic values and our freedom, the United States--as the leader of the free world and its only remaining superpower--should be prepared to use every diplomatic, economic, and military means at our disposal to defend ourselves and to defeat these forces of evil. Of course, we should deploy our best diplomatic efforts to engage our friends and allies around the world in this war against international terrorism. Of course we should do that. I personally appreciate, as I think our Nation should, and does, the support immediately expressed yesterday by President Putin and the Russian people. As our allies around the world look to us for leadership and protection, we must call upon all nations to provide their friendship and support in this critical time of need. However, while diplomacy will play a central role in this war against terrorism, we must deploy the full economic and military might of the United States against those who threaten our citizens, our national security interests, our democracy, and our freedom. Those who kill innocent Americans must be held accountable. And make no mistake about it, they will be. Moreover, I stand firmly with the President on this crucial point: Those who aid and harbor perpetrators of terror must also be held accountable. Make no mistake about that, they will be. International terrorism is perhaps the greatest modern threat to our national security interests. We must be prepared to act accordingly. General Holland, the U. He has no civilian counterpart. We need to establish one. The successful fight against terrorism is one that will require the highest level of diplomatic skill in gathering intelligence, as well as the most effective use for economic and military strength. However, when diplomacy fails, as regrettably it does on occasion, we must be prepared to employ alternatives. Terrorists, especially those who have the capability to plan and execute the kinds of attacks we witnessed graphically yesterday, require a significant level of financing and protection.

I can allow my feminine-specific suffering under patriarchy to be the conduit for my passionate pursuit of justice and my spark of love I extend toward others. For truly, I am the arms stretched out inside the fallopian tubes. The darkest night of my soul under patriarchy can become the very hope for others to find light. And sometimes, through subversion, cleverness, or simply taking advantage of unexpected opportunities to exercise influence, they can go beyond survival and bring about change. Articles Susan McLeod-Harrison - March 13, I can see now that, like my spiritual director said long ago, my image of God was all wrong. The image of God as Father left me with too few harbors to go for emotional safety. He would send me out to sea, endlessly, on some errand of his own design, as he did Jonah. Her real story is remarkable, and can be uncovered through the accurate interpretation of scripture. Erica Lea - August 29, God is with us. Sophia is with us. Woman Wisdom is with us. We are with each other. We can continue to move forward together on this journey of shalom as we lean on God and lean on one another. Mattison - July 12, "Of course we were confronted with innumerable problems and questions as we worked through the text. We understood that our task had to be about more than simply swapping out a few words and changing some pronouns. But I will also stress that constitutionality is always only one small part of understanding why legislators do what they do. A hostile feeling or animus toward transgender people becomes an important part of the legal discussion. When I soon after found that there is a book that teaches children such behavior from an early age I knew it was something about which I needed to spread the word. Articles Virginia Ramey Mollenkott - February 9, Barlas points out the irony that out of a collection of 70, Islamic sayings, only about six can reliably be called misogynistic. The parallel to using the Bible against homosexuals is obvious, but so is the parallel to male supremacist theories in the Jewish and Christian traditions. We Christian feminists need to lift up such ironies, repeatedly and without apology. This issue of balance is at the root of a lot of conflict in the areas of employment and consumer protection. Christy Sim - October 6, If someone is being abused, they feel responsible for the abuse. Why this logical inconsistency? I would advise you not to take that sense of power away, but, instead, to model what it is like to not accept responsibility for what the abuser is doing. The third phase of the 'widening circle of empathy,' where much of the West has arrived today, is that of extending trust to alien out-groupsâ€”the more alien, the better.

Alex07 And so it goes. This truly is insanity. We can try to deal with that small percentage of the population who collect or own guns for hunting, target shooting or security, but to claim as a constitutional right the possession of firearms intended for nothing less than brutal, gruesome warfare strains credulity. These are killing machines with no purpose other than to maim and destroy. Every time someone unleashes gun violence and takes multiple victims, we begin with adamant, genuine grief and a collective wringing of hands. Then we are told that the immediate aftermath is not the time to bring politics into a time of sorrow, and then that, yes, maybe we will look into the license to kill we permit with our lax gun laws. Then the flowers will fade, the candles will gutter, the memorials will be over and nothing will be done. But beyond the horrific scale of the Las Vegas killings, there were a couple of things that struck us as different about this latest tragedy. I mean, they criticize the NRA. You want to talk about irresponsible use of firearms? We spend millions teaching responsible use of firearms. They make billions every single day, teaching irresponsible use of firearms. The NRA believes that devices designed to allow semi-automatic rifles to function like fully automatic rifles should be subject to additional regulations. In truth, the NRA still wants to steer clear of any open debate in Congress that conceivably could change minds and even lead to other new gun control rules already widely favored by the public â€” like a renewal of the ban on assault rifles, universal background checks and a federal data base tracking gun sales. This has been a conundrum humans have fought with since Cain and Abel. You cannot legislate compliance with evil. People are going to be evil. The problem is that if you insist that civilization cannot avoid the generation of evil acts â€” that the force of evil is out of the control of mere mortals â€” you are throwing up your hands and shirking responsibility for taking action. The only response to evil is to identify it clearly, to avoid secular soft-headedness, and perhaps to mitigate its effects as and when they arise, without presuming to abolish it. In other words, gun control will not work. He knows the answer. Follow him on Twitter:

generous philanthropist, a loyal friend and devoted to the principles of the oneness of God, the oneness of religion, and the oneness of humanity. His funeral was held on Friday, March 17th at 2: Sidney graduated from Princeton University, with a degree in American History and shortly afterwards made his home in the Southwest. Sidney was a friend to many, a lover of good conversation, with a ready smile and an indomitable, generous spirit. And for all this, his greatest pride and joy were his children and grandchildren. We will always feel his presence through the horned toad, the bumble bee and the Orca whale and in all the places, near and far, where he left his mark! Published in the Arizona Daily Star on January 22, Beloved husband of Dr. He would have been 82 on October 30th. Pete faced the challenges his ailing body imposed on him bravely and with grace. He said on many occasions that he was grateful to have a long goodbye, during which he could talk about many things with those close to him. Even when he became too weak to get out of bed on his own, or even to roll over, he said he was glad that he could still welcome the day and see the sunset from the lovely corner room he occupied at the Sancta Maria Nursing Facility in Cambridge, MA. He was kind but critical, and he was easily amused. He loved being alive. Pete was born in Bronxville, NY, and spent most of his childhood in Hartsdale, NY, where he loved to roam about on his own with his friends—it was an era when children could just hang out without parental supervision. He went to public schools, played sports and engaged in student government. So, she was only 4 years old when he left for college. His father, Marcellus B. McDavitt, was an engineer who had a distinguished career at Bell Labs, and his mother, Helen Peterson McDavitt, a former teacher, was primarily a homemaker. Pete went to White Plains High, which had a tiger as its mascot. It was then fitting that Pete went on to another school with a tiger mascot, Princeton University, where he concentrated in aeronautical engineering. Pete adored the place—his roommates, and his Tiger Inn buddies. He worked very hard, achieving honors, and played just as hard. The pals he made all through school remained lifelong friends. He was proud to have had drinks in his own rooms with Dean Acheson, and to have met many heady thinkers and musicians. He coached rugby until he was nearly Pete was a bachelor longer than most of his friends, but when he met Barbara Nelson at a picnic, he was smitten, and they were married in Their marriage was harmonious and truly happy. They had two children, Sarah and Bill, who now have families of their own. Barbara was one of those people who made friends with everyone she met, and people would tell her their life stories after just a few minutes. Barbara and Pete had a lively social life with friends and with their extended family. Sadly, Barbara developed a rare condition, sideroblastic myelodysplasia in ; there was no effective therapy. She succumbed in Though devastated, Pete was glad, he said, to have been able to be with her and do many things during the 7 years she had remaining after the diagnosis. Pete also missed having a life partner. Both gradually realized that they had fallen in love in spite of themselves. They were married on Labor Day Weekend in Together, Pete and Julie had 10 grandchildren. They enjoyed a rich, happy life together. Those travels enabled Pete to reconnect with old friends all over the world, some that had begun as far back as elementary school. Pete loved classical music, reading and almost any outdoor activity. In his 70s, Pete read all of Proust for the first time, and he delighted in it. Pete belonged to a music listening group, and also to Harvard Musical Association. He particularly loved the writings of Lawrence Durrell and the music of Haydn. Pete was paired with 7-year-old Sal Carrero, now grown and a college graduate. Sal has been and will continue to be an intentional member of our family. And I hope some of my stories will provoke chuckles. He followed that with a list of his bad habits. The reader may see some of the introductory remarks at the end of this note. Pete was a loving and devoted father and grandfather to his children—Sarah and her husband Ted Woods, and their children, Lelia, Elizabeth and Ansel, and to Bill and his wife Anya McDavitt, and their children, Carter and Spencer. He was also a devoted stepfather and grandfather to Erich Ingelfinger and his wife, Trina and their children, Oscar, Iris and Marcus; Franz Ingelfinger and his wife, Cynthia, and their children, Nate and Maeve; and to Katey Ingelfinger. He once was the president of the Young Republican Club of Hartford, CT, and strongly believed that armed strength was the way to peace for the world. Over time, he came to believe that universal education and jobs, fair treatment and opportunity were far better options. He had high hopes for the planet, and his wish was that his grandchildren will work to make the world

Lowe Narrowly escaping death twice, Gilbert Patterson has long known that God had a plan for his life. Today he believes he was spared to lead the Church of God in Christ into the 21st century. On June 13, , a lone gunman named Willie C. Cheatham positioned himself across the street from Temple of Deliverance Church in Memphis, Tennessee, waiting for the young pastor of the congregation, Gilbert Earl Patterson, to exit the building. Cheatham peered through the scope of his. He was angry at Patterson for preaching against domestic violence. As Patterson exited the church building and walked toward his car, he noticed Cheatham. Maybe it was the noonday prayer that preacher Patterson had just finished that kept him from sudden death. Or perhaps the Lord dispatched a legion of angels to protect him. One thing is certain--when the shooting stopped, 14 bullet holes lined the old meat market next to the church, but Patterson had reached his car before the shooting started and sped off. Twenty-one years later, October , Patterson was in a car with three other men as they drove west on Interstate 40 en route to Memphis from a preaching engagement. Suddenly, the driver slipped into unconsciousness. Instead, he says the Lord spoke to him and told him to take his right hand and place the gear shift in neutral. The car slowed down. Get Spirit-filled content delivered right to your inbox! Click here to subscribe to our newsletter. When Patterson recalls the near misses that almost took his life, he says he is certain of one thing: Patterson took office with a passion to serve his denomination in the same dedicated way as its founder, Charles Harrison Mason. He continues to pastor his 14,member Temple of Deliverance COGIC in Memphis, and with a million-dollar multimedia ministry at his disposal he believes he has a mandate from heaven to storm the country with a no-frills, life-changing gospel. Patterson has carried that fire with him since his last year of high school, when he started preaching at age Patterson, was the jurisdictional bishop for churches in North Carolina. His uncle, Bishop J. Vinson Synan, author of The Century of the Holy Spirit Thomas Nelson and dean of the divinity school at Regent University, calls Patterson "one of the best preachers on the face of the planet. They jokingly say he is so well-liked that even as a Pentecostal pastor he could run for president of the non-Pentecostal National Baptist Convention and win. With all the attention he receives, one might think Patterson is untouchable. Charisma spoke with Bishop Patterson in Birmingham, Alabama, recently, where he talked about his early days in ministry, his views on women in ministry and his vision for COGIC in the 21st century. Winds of Change While most Americans focused their attention last fall on one of the most highly contested presidential elections in U. The general assembly voted a sitting presiding bishop out of office and selected a new leader to take the helm. The contest between former presiding Bishop Chandler D. Owens of Atlanta and Patterson ended in a win for Patterson, 2,, It seems only natural that today Patterson would rise to the position of the highest-ranking official in his denomination--after all of the childhood grooming he received in the church decades ago. Patterson and his other siblings grew up in a Pentecostal home. The family moved to Memphis, and it was there, at age 4, that Patterson started preaching soul-stirring messages to "congregations" of two or three children. The Pattersons moved to Detroit in , and four years later--on Sunday, Sept. It was a life-changing event during his teen years, and it seemed to set the stage for the passionate preaching currently seen by millions of viewers of his TV programs. A holy hush covered the convention center as the presiding bishop went on to explain his view on women in ministry. COGIC women are known for pioneering churches in the most impoverished neighborhoods in the country, and they are recognized for their work in remote areas of Third World countries. Some believe that number needs to increase. Patterson says he will work toward giving every card-carrying member in COGIC the right to cast a vote. A technological system is needed because, so far, the denomination has no venue large enough to hold all qualified voters at one time. The election is held a week after the U. With all of the hoopla surrounding the Gore-Bush presidential race, the right to vote seems extremely crucial, not only in the church but also in American politics. Bush invited a string of key black religious leaders, including Bishop Patterson, to Washington in late March. He promotes unity in the body of Christ among all groups and says Christians should map out ways to bring white, black, Hispanic and other groups together under one roof. In fact, his involvement in the civil rights movement in the late s is what has fueled his message of unity. He was involved in the strike of that centered on black sanitation workers in Memphis and was a member of the nine-person strategy committee that brought Martin Luther King Jr. The bishop remembers briefly talking with King on two occasions and says his denomination has played a key part in major historical events. King finished his speech, you could hear sobbing and weeping in the rafters, and everybody knew that was it. That was a prophetic moment. In fact, some of his most grueling tests and hardships in life have come through the church. The same year, he opened the doors to Temple of Deliverance Cathedral of Bountiful Blessings with members. In time, the Pattersons healed their old wounds, and in G. The lessons he learned during the turmoil in ministry proved beneficial during his first few months in office. In January, he intervened in an ongoing bitter court battle between former presiding Bishop Owens, Bishop H. Owens told an Orange County, Florida, judge that the presiding bishop had rights similar to the pope and that he could remove a pastor without charges. In an effort to keep the denomination out of court and give Orlando congregants a place to worship, Patterson brought an end to the highly publicized ordeal. In March, Bishop Patterson settled the matter out of court. Bringing healing to people regardless of their circumstances seems to be the call of a man who, as a child, knew he was destined to preach the gospel. No doubt Bishop Patterson prayed the prayer heard by millions of viewers who watch him weekly: Today, as presiding bishop-elect of COGIC, Patterson is making good on his promises, saying that integrity, especially in ministry, builds trust among leaders and the people they serve. Charisma As the largest denomination in the United States, the Church of God in Christ has the potential to leave a profound mark on the world. How will the church accomplish this? We have already begun a massive witnessing program. Our program is strategic. For decades, we have sent missionaries to 58 foreign countries including Third World nations. We do this to minister to people and to maintain our visibility in remote areas. We have pastors and missionaries in Japan, the Philippines, England and in other places in the world. Charisma What direction is the church headed in the new millennium? To know what is happening in the body of Christ, you have to also have a working knowledge of biblical history. The church basically follows the same trail Israel and Judah followed. There were spiritual conditions that led to the northern and southern kingdoms splitting. Any time the upper echelon of the church does not teach the Word and obey it you are in dangerous territory. The Church of God in Christ is no longer a babe. It was the national church. Charisma How will you keep constituents informed of progress in the denomination? On July 1 we launched our national TV ministry. Our coverage extends across the United States on several television networks. We also have some programming that will serve as a forum to discuss issues that are pertinent to COGIC and the world. We also have a strong presence on the World Wide Web and radio. Charisma What are your thoughts on the black church? We must move away from this black church-white church thinking. The Church of God in Christ did not start as a black church. Historians will tell you, especially Vinson Synan, who has written about the Pentecostal movement in America, that COGIC was about 50 percent white and 50 percent black between and People are marrying across racial lines, and the church has to be able to minister universally. The gospel is the same gospel for whites, blacks, Hispanics, the French, Germans and just whosoever. Somebody might ask how should we bring about the meshing of the races? By preaching a pure gospel, because people are repelled when they hear slants and ethnic slurs. We must be prepared with a universal gospel for the whole world. Charisma Is the presiding bishop accountable to anyone? The presiding bishop and the member general [governing] board are accountable to the general assembly--the law-making body of our church. In COGIC, the general assembly--thousands of pastors, elders, women leaders and lay members--is at the top and the general board is under the assembly. This means I am accountable to the assembly, and every time it convenes I must give an account of my stewardship in the Church of God in Christ. look at Louise Patterson, wife of presiding Bishop Gilbert Patterson, reveals a woman who is used to serving in the trenches of ministry. A member of a Methodist church, she decided to attend a revival service conducted by a young evangelist by the name of Gilbert Patterson. In , the Pattersons married in Memphis. And though the couple never had children, during their first year of marriage they began helping young people with college expenses. Also a COGIC missionary, Patterson says being in the "sanctified, holiness church" is probably as close as a person will ever come to living the kind of life depicted in the Bible. When her physician said she would eventually be confined to a wheelchair for the rest of her life, she sought God in prayer.
