The side that calls the witness first asks questions in what is called direct examination. The opposing side then may ask their own questions in what is called cross-examination. In some cases, redirect examination may be used by the side that called the witness but usually only to contradict specific testimony from the cross-examination. Recalling a witness means calling a witness, who has already given testimony in a proceeding, to give further testimony. Testimony[edit] Witnesses are usually permitted to testify only what they experienced first-hand. In most cases, they may not testify about something they were told hearsay. That restriction does not apply to expert witnesses, but they may testify only in the area of their expertise. Reliability[edit] Eyewitness testimony is generally presumed to be more reliable than circumstantial evidence. Studies have shown, however, that individual, separate witness testimony is often flawed, and parts of it can be meaningless. That can occur because of flaws in eyewitness identification such as faulty observation and recollection, or bias or because a witness is lying. If several people witness a crime, it is probative to look for similarities in their collective descriptions to substantiate the facts of an event but to keep in mind the contrasts between individual descriptions. One study involved an experiment, in which subjects acted as jurors in a criminal case. Jurors heard a description of a robbery-murder, a prosecution argument, and then an argument for the defense. Some jurors heard only circumstantial evidence ; others heard from a clerk who claimed to identify the defendant. In another study, students watched a staged crime. An hour later they looked through photos. A week later they were asked to pick the suspect out of lineups. Another study looked at 65 cases of "erroneous criminal convictions of innocent people. Although cognitive processes can be only inferred and cannot be seen directly, they all have very important practical implications within a legal context. If one were to accept that the way people think, perceive, reason, and judge is not always perfect, it becomes easier to understand why cognitive processes and the factors influencing the processes are studied by psychologists in matters of law, one being the grave implications that this imperfection can have within the criminal justice system. The study of witness memory has dominated the realm of investigation. As Huff and Rattner [2] note, the single most important factor contributing to wrongful conviction is eyewitness misidentification. Generally, they are deemed to be credible if they are recognized or can be recognized as a source of reliable information about someone, an event, or a phenomenon. As an example, the arrest of an illegal immigrant from El Salvador in the murder of federal intern Chandra Levy saw many questions arise surrounding the credibility of various witnesses. Contesting the credibility of so-called "expert" witnesses rose into more common practice in the s and s.

Witness For The Dead has 20 ratings and 6 reviews. Emily said: This review is my thoughts and feelings towards the book. It will not summarize the book.

Law enforcement leading the investigation into the massacre have concluded that Stephen Paddock, 64, was the lone gunman on 1 October, when he opened fire with a modified weapon from the 32nd floor of the Mandalay Bay Resort and Casino onto a crowd below attending an outdoor country music festival. Neon Nettle, along with other conspiratorial web sites, have been aggressively pushing the idea that Paddock had an accomplice. With great paranoia, Neon Nettle reported: In the month that followed the incident, a staggering seven key witnesses have died in very suspicious circumstances. Whether this series of disturbing deaths and disappearances are purely coincidental or whether there is something deeply sinister afoot has yet to be determined. Among the seven named, two died in an apparent car accident. One appears to have been misidentified by conspiracy theorists. A third is, in fact, not dead, while another had serious medical complications. Dennis and Lorraine Carver: Carver and her husband Dennis were killed on 16 October in a car accident near their home in Murrieta, California, when their car veered off a curve in a road at Both were pronounced dead at the scene. On 23 October, police and fire personnel discovered the body of Danny Contreras, 35, who died of multiple gunshot wounds in a vacant home in Las Vegas. Police said they believe the homicide was narcotics-related. According to Neon Nettle, a now-suspended Twitter account apparently being used by a person using that name posted that he was lucky to have gotten out of the concert alive after being chased by two men with guns. Suchomel was apparently experiencing trouble sleeping as sounds and images from the massacre would terrorize her at night. She drew the attention of conspiracy theorists with a now-private Facebook post attributed to her in which she said there was more than one shooter, writing: There is no connection between that tragedy and the Las Vegas massacre – a link between the two deadly incidents was established exclusively by disreputable conspiracy sites like WhatDoesItMean. After shooting at the crowd for 10 minutes, Paddock turned his weapon on himself. According to police radio traffic which can be found archived at Broadcastify, Paddock did not exchange gunfire with police. When they breached the door and went inside, Paddock was already down. New Testament[edit] A passage in the New Testament which may refer to a prayer for the dead is found in 2 Timothy 1: It is not stated that Onesiphorus, for whom Saint Paul prayed, was dead, though some scholars infer this, based on the way Paul only refers to him in the past tense, and prays for present blessings on his household, but for him only "on that day". And towards the end of the same letter, in 2 Timothy 4: Tradition[edit] Prayer for the dead is well documented within early Christianity , both among prominent Church Fathers and the Christian community in general. In Eastern Orthodoxy Christians pray for "such souls as have departed with faith, but without having had time to bring forth fruits worthy of repentance". The tomb of the Christian Abercius of Hieropolis in Phrygia latter part of the 2nd century bears the inscription: Abercius, who throughout speaks in the first person. Mayst thou live among the saints 3rd century ; [1] May God refresh the soul of. This passage occurs in one of his later writings, dating from the beginning of the 3rd century. Subsequent writers similarly make mention of the practice as prevalent, not as unlawful or even disputed until Arius challenged it towards the end of the 4th century. The language used in the prayers for the departed is asking for rest and freedom from pain and sorrow. Remember, O Lord, the God of Spirits and of all Flesh, those whom we have remembered and those whom we have not remembered, men of the true faith, from righteous Abel unto to-day; do thou thyself give them rest there in the land of the living, in thy kingdom, in the delight of Paradise , in the bosom of Abraham , Isaac and Jacob , our holy fathers , from whence pain and sorrow and sighing have fled away, where the light of thy countenance visiteth them and always shineth upon them. But Saint Perpetua , who was martyred in , believed herself to have been encouraged in a vision to pray for her brother, who had died in his eighth year, almost certainly unbaptized; and a later vision assured her that her prayer was answered and he had been translated from punishment. Augustine thought it needful to point out that the narrative was not canonical Scripture, and contended that the child had perhaps been baptized. Prayer for the dead is encouraged in the belief that it is helpful for them, though how the prayers of the faithful help the departed is not elucidated. Eastern Orthodox simply believe that tradition teaches that prayers should be made for the dead. But we who are living will bless thee, and will pray, and offer unto thee propitiatory prayers and sacrifices for their souls. For this reason, memorial services have an air of penitence about them. Then the body is washed, clothed and laid in the coffin, after which the priest begins the First Panikhida prayer service for the departed. After the First Panikhida, the family and friends begin reading the Psalter aloud beside the casket. This reading continues and concludes until the next morning, in which usually the funeral is held, up until the time of the orthros. Orthodox Christians offer particularly fervent prayers for the departed on the first 40 days after death. Traditionally, in addition to the service on the day of death, the memorial service is performed at the request of the relatives of an individual departed person on the following occasions: Third day after death [21] Ninth day First anniversary of death Third anniversary some will request a memorial every year on the anniversary of death In addition to Panikhidas for individuals, there are also several days during the year that are set aside as special general commemorations of the dead, when all departed Orthodox Christians will be prayed for together this is especially to benefit those who have no one on earth to pray for them. The majority of these general commemorations fall on the various " Soul Saturdays " throughout the year mostly during Great Lent. On these days, in addition to the normal Panikhida, there are special additions to Vespers and Matins , and there will be propers for the departed added to the Divine Liturgy. These days of general memorial are: Meatfare Saturday two Saturdays before Great Lent begins "in some traditions families and friends will offer Panikhidas for their loved ones during the week, culminating in the general commemoration on Saturday The second Saturday of Great Lent The third Saturday of Great Lent The fourth Saturday of Great Lent Radonitsa the second Tuesday after Easter The Saturday before Pentecost "in some traditions families and friends will offer Panikhidas for their loved ones during the week, culminating in the general commemoration on Saturday Demetrius Saturday the Saturday before the feast of Saint Demetrius , October The most important form of prayer for the dead occurs in the Divine Liturgy. Particles are cut from the prosphoron during the Proskomedia at the beginning of the Liturgy. These particles are placed beneath the Lamb Host on the diskos , where they remain throughout the Liturgy. After the Communion of the faithful, the deacon brushes these particles into the chalice , saying, "Wash away, O Lord, the sins of all those here commemorated, by Thy Precious Blood, through the prayers of all thy saints. Of this they are always in need The body feels nothing then: But the soul senses the prayers offered for it and is grateful to those who make them and is spiritually close to them. Then, on the eve of their Glorification will be served an especially solemn Requiem , known as the "Last Panikhida. Theoretically, too, prayer for those in hell understood as the abode of the eternally lost would be useless, but since there is no certainty that any particular person is in hell understood in that sense, prayers were and are offered for all the dead, except for those believed to be in heaven. These are prayed to, not for. Thus, prayers were and are offered for all those in Hades , the abode of the dead who are not known to be in heaven, sometimes rendered as "hell". Limits were placed on public offering of Mass for the unbaptised, non-Catholics, and notorious sinners, but prayers and even Mass in private could be said for them. The present Code of Canon Law of the Catholic Church states that, unless the person concerned gave some signs of repentance before death, no form of funeral Mass may be offered for notorious apostates, heretics and schismatics ; those who for anti-Christian motives chose that their bodies be cremated; and other manifest sinners to whom a Church funeral could not be granted without public scandal to the faithful. The two extra Masses were in no way to benefit the priest himself: In Communio Sanctorum, the Lutheran and Roman Catholic Churches in Germany agreed that prayer for the dead "corresponds to the communion in which we are bound together in Christ Prayerful commendation of the dead to God is salutary within a funeral liturgy. The prayers during the Sunday Eucharistic Liturgy include intercessions for the repose of the faithful departed. Furthermore, most of the prayers in the burial rite are for the deceased, including the opening collect: O God, whose mercies cannot be numbered: Accept our prayers on behalf of thy servant N. For example, following the intercessions, there are two options for a concluding prayer: Father of all, we pray to you for N. Grant to them eternal rest. Let light perpetual shine upon them. May his soul and the souls of all the departed, through the mercy of God, rest in peace. Then do not be dismayed about your child or yourself. Know that your prayer is pleasing to God and that God will do everything much better than you can comprehend or desire. Believers and Christians have devoted their longing and yearning and praying for them. But they recognized that the early Church had practiced prayer for the dead, and accepted it in principle. Thus in the Book of Concord, the Lutheran Church taught: And at the last For whom should we pray? We should pray for ourselves and for all other people, even for our enemies, but not for the souls of the dead. Lutherans do not pray for the souls of the departed. When a person dies his soul goes to either heaven or hell. There is no second chance after death. The Bible tells us, "Man is destined to die once and after that to face judgment" Hebrew 9: It would do no good to pray for someone who has died. The chief among these are baptism for the dead and the sealing of the dead to families. Family members will pray around the body as soon as possible after death. People try to avoid touching the corpse as it is considered polluting. Islamic funeral In Islam , Muslims of their community gather to their collective prayers for the forgiveness of the dead, a prayer is recited and this prayer is known as the Salat al-Janazah Janazah prayer. The Janazah prayer is as follows: Supplication for the deceased and mankind is recited. In extraordinary circumstances, the prayer can be postponed and prayed at a later time as was done in the Battle of Uhud. Dogma states it is obligatory for every Muslim adult male to perform the funeral prayer upon the death of any Muslim, but the dogma embraces the practical in that it qualifies, when Janazah is performed by the few it alleviates that obligation for all. In addition, "Peace be upon him" sometimes abbreviated in writing as PBUH is a constantly repeated prayer for dead people such as Mohammed. Yizkor Prayers for the dead form part of the Jewish services. The prayers offered on behalf of the deceased consist of: Recitation of Psalms ; Reciting a thrice daily communal prayer in Aramaic which is known as Kaddish. Kaddish actually means "Sanctification" or "Prayer of Making Holy" which is a prayer "In Praise of God"; or other special remembrances known as Yizkor ; and also a Hazkara which is said either on the annual commemoration known as the Yahrzeit as well on Jewish holidays. The form in use in England contains the following passage:

Shelter his soul in the shadow of Thy wings. Make known to him the path of life. There are various translations for the original Hebrew which vary significantly. May You who are the source of mercy shelter them beneath Your wings eternally, and bind their souls among the living, that they may rest in peace. And let us say: But under the tunic of each of the dead they found amulets sacred to the idols of Jamnia, which the law forbids the Jews to wear. So it was clear to all that this was why these men had been slain. They all therefore praised the ways of the Lord, the just judge who brings to light the things that are hidden. Turning to supplication, they prayed that the sinful deed might be fully blotted out. The noble Judas warned the soldiers to keep themselves free from sin, for they had seen with their own eyes what had happened because of the sin of those who had fallen. He then took up a collection among all his soldiers, amounting to two thousand silver drachmas, which he sent to Jerusalem to provide for an expiatory sacrifice. In doing this he acted in a very excellent and noble way, inasmuch as he had the resurrection of the dead in view; for if he were not expecting the fallen to rise again, it would have been useless and foolish to pray for them in death. But if he did this with a view to the splendid reward that awaits those who had gone to rest in godliness, it was a holy and pious thought. Thus he made atonement for the dead that they might be freed from this sin. The account of the action of Judas Maccabaeus was written midway through the second half of the same century, in about B.
