SEO techniques help bring the online traffic you desire and thus enable your website to be ranked higher than millions of others in search engine results. However, it is not an easy task as search engines are now more advanced and require you to work hard to achieve the top rank. However, before you make a jump to using expert SEO techniques, here are some basic rules and elements of good SEO, that you should follow:. If content is King, then link is Queen. Build a network of quality links around your website and remember, the purpose of link building is not quantity, but quality. One good and trustworthy link is better than a hundred links of poor quality. Search engine friendly URLs: Always clearly name the URLs with your main keywords. Also, ensure that the URLs are simple and easy to understand. Flash elements within your webpage may look pretty and fancy, but actually do little to improve SEO. Though it may add to the user experience of a website, placing it on the main navigational path of a website can hurt your SEO efforts. Is your website following these basic rules? If so, then you and your website are on the path to a successful SEO. Though the design and overall look and feel, the captivating layouts and interactive nature of these creations may be called as a treat for the senses, the truth is that they are a treat only for eyes and ears and nothing more. Thus it does not give the user a complete sense of a make-believe reality. Studies and experiments the world over has time and again proved that more than half of communication that humans are not verbal in nature. This has led to scientists increasingly trying to devise ways of being able to communicate through the other three senses namely taste, smell and touch. The professor teaching pervasive computing at the City University of London, asked this question over an iPhone to a person standing on the other side of the room as to what does the person smell? The professor agrees and tells that these instruments are selling more than units a month harbouring the era of bringing smell into the social communication platform. When the liquid in it responsible for the scent finishes you need to get another sachet as a replacement. This is not something that is new technology though, since in there was a story running on the front cover of the famous wired magazine that talked about a company called Digiscents that had come up with a USB compatible personal scent synthesizer that worked on the computer called the iSmellDigiscents. When this technology was invented back then, it looked more of a marketing pitch but is contextual nowadays with all the smartphones with ultra-high processing power and superfast connection speed bringing in all sorts of possibilities on the forefront. There are some other fun projects of his as well, like small haptic rings that can make someone else sense a squeeze on their ring if the other person squeezes theirs over the internet. This looks a lot like virtual handholding of sorts. Yet another project of his involves a device that consists of electrodes and triggers the taste receptors on tongue thus creating an artificial sense of taste in the brain. There have also been certain advancements in mobile technology with respect to installation of apps on pc without android emulator for playing that favourite mobile game on your desktop PC. Some other projects along these lines are also being carried out in the National University of Singapore that are about creating a digital lollipop that makes the tongue artificially experience the taste of salt, sweet, bitter and sour things.
